positive support for the shirts. The business group, which calls itself "Dudes," already has sold 36 shirts to friends and other people. Posters for the shirts, which can be ordered by mail, went up around campus last week, Frank said. Since the figure on the shirt isn't really a copy of Jim, the "Dudes" aren't infringing on any copyright laws, Frank said. "The guy on the shirt doesn't look at all like the real Jim, but when people look at it they know who we mean," he said. "A stick figure as seen on the shirt isn't copyrightable." The shirts come in large and extra large and cost $10. Order forms can be found with the posters at locations such as the Reunion and residence halls.
