

Dorothy Lynch celebrates 25 years of homestyle taste and few changes

By Emily Rosenbaum
Senior Reporter

Yes, there really was a Dorothy Lynch. In the 1930s, Dorothy and her husband Art operated the concession area at the American Legion Club in St. Paul. And Dorothy served her special homemade salad dressing.

Now that same dressing is available in 22 states and the manufacturer is celebrating the 25th anniversary of Dorothy Lynch Homestyle Dressing.

Dorothy's dressing became popular in St. Paul and in neighboring communities and grocers started requesting bottles for their shelves.

At first, the Lynch's put their dressing in ketchup bottles and then eventually used the bottle that the dressing still is found in today. The Lynch's manufacturing plant consisted of a two-room house in St. Paul and a staff made up of a delivery man whose route system took the dressing to Norfolk, North Platte, Lincoln and Omaha.

In 1964, the Lynch's began to look for financing to expand their operation. They approached several possible investors, including the father-in-law of the man who eventually bought out the Lynch's.

Mac Hull was working as a lawyer when the Lynch's approached his father-in-law about financing their operation. Hull was asked to serve as a legal advisor to the meeting and became interested enough to make an offer to purchase the rights to the Lynch's dressing. He bought them out and has been the owner of Dorothy Lynch dressing ever since.

Hull formed Tasty Toppings, Inc., in Columbus which distributes the dressing. The dressing is manufactured in Duncan.

Hull marketed the dressing, keeping the same name Dorothy had used -- Dorothy Lynch French Dressing. He was forced to change the name later because of Food and Drug Administration regulations which stated that the dressing did not have enough oil in it to be called "French" and in 1964, "Homestyle" replaced "French."

Hull said the recipe for Dorothy's dressing hasn't radically changed since the 1930s, but "it's been modified enough to make it shelf stable."

Dorothy claimed the dressing's recipe as her own creation, Hull said, but he's not certain exactly how she came up with it.

"I think she took three different recipes and combined them," he said. "She was a very creative lady."

Over the years, he said, others have approached him claiming the recipe as their own, but none have been able to prove it.

As for Dorothy, according to Hull, she died in 1975 and her husband retired several years ago and now lives in Arizona, Hull said.

Jazz/Blues:
Tonight, Jazz Underground will play finger-snapping and toe-tapping good jazz at the Zoo Bar, 136 N. 14th St.

Thursday through Saturday, A.C. Reed and the Sparkplugs will play at the Zoo Bar.

A.C. Reed and the Sparkplugs play straight-ahead Chicago blues featuring Reed's gritty humorous vocals and riveting saxophone solos. Man, can he blow a horn.

Monday, John Hammond will play acoustic blues at the Zoo Bar.

John Hammond received two ovations from a standing-room-only crowd at the Zoo about a year ago.

Hammond is regarded as one of the best solo blues artists in the world today. Performing Mississippi delta blues is a way of life for Hammond. You can hear his passion for it in his voice and see his love of it in his eyes. Onstage there's only one word for him: "intense."

He begins by stomping out a steady rhythm on the wooden floor with his boot. And then he starts up on the guitar, sliding up and down and all over the place. Then he howls and growls sad and aching beautiful lyrics and he wails through the harmonica mounted on the rack around his neck.

And he doesn't let up. All night long.

Tuesday, Joe "King" Carrasco and the Crowns will play at the Zoo Bar.

Rock:

Wednesday and Thursday, J.J. and the Blaze will play at Chesterfield's, Lower Level 245 N. 13th St.

Friday and Saturday, Bobby Curious will play at Chesterfield's.

effectively highlights the mood of each song.

The album also contains several anthems to the fight for racial equality and personal dignity, such as "The Black and the White" and "E.C."

"Snitride" contains 11 different songs, meaning different in terms of musical style and editorial content. The sheer variety of songs on this album makes it an interesting and exciting album to listen to over and over again. And it proves the Nightmares are not in a rut.
