

Daily Nebraskan

December 18, 1989

University of Nebraska-Lincoln

Vol. 89 No. 76

Monday
WEATHER:	INDEX
Monday, cloudy and cold, high 10, 50 percent chance of snow, light east winds. Monday night, low 5 to 10 below zero, 40 percent chance of snow. Tuesday, partly cloudy, high 5.	News Digest 2 Editorial 4 Sports 8 Arts & Entertainment 11 Classifieds 13

Bruce Warner, a graduate student in exercise science, studies for his animal physiology final Sunday afternoon in Manter Hall.

Devaney: Share NCAA revenue

By Jana Pedersen
Senior Editor

Although UNL officials aren't sure how the NCAA plans to distribute the $1 billion it earned through a television contract with CBS, they're hoping that some of the money will reach the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The majority of the money will come from CBS's right to broadcast the men's NCAA Tournament.

But Bob Devaney, NU athletic director, said he believes the money distribution won't be restricted just to basketball programs in the tournament.

"I hope that it's distributed to people not in the tournament because that would help us more," Devaney said.

The NCAA national conference will be Jan. 5 through 8 in Dallas. Distribution of the money probably will be discussed at the conference, he said, although he was unsure if it was on the agenda.

Devaney said he hasn't looked at any proposals for the distribution of the money, but is concerned that UNL gets its share.

Martin Massengale, UNL chancellor and interim NU president, said he and other members of the NCAA Restructuring Committee had a brief discussion about the new contract at a committee meeting Thursday in Chicago. The committee did not formulate any definite proposals for the distribution of the revenue.

The committee discussed using part of the proceeds from the contract to finance a catastrophic insurance policy for each collegiate athlete,

'When you're talking about $1 billion, you're bound to get people's attention.'

--O'Hanlon

Massengale said. The insurance money would be used for an athlete who was seriously injured, he said.

Massengale said he wants to take a closer look at the revenue sharing already in place throughout the NCAA before making a final decision on how the money should be spent.

About 300 NCAA schools participate in some form of revenue sharing, he said.

"I think there's a broader sharing now than most people realize," he said.

Helping programs that have financial difficulties is another important consideration, Massengale said.

"We'll have to find a balance," he said. "We need to help some programs survive and at the same time provide awards for excellence."

Massengale said the NCAA Presidents Commission, of which he is also a member, has not discussed the matter.

James O'Hanlon, UNL's representative to the NCAA, said details have not been worked out on any proposals for the distribution of the money. But, he said, there has been some "very early discussion" on the issue.

"The main focus of discussion is how widely the money should be distributed," O'Hanlon said. "In the past, we (UNL officials) have been generally focused toward greater distribution."

But UNL officials have yet to take a formal position on the distribution of the new revenue, he said.

O'Hanlon said he believes the contract will be discussed at the January NCAA conference.

"When you're talking about $1 billion, you're bound to get people's attention," he said.

RHA presidency to change hands; Wickless seeks ASUN senate seat

By Lisa Bolin
Staff Reporter

Stacy Mohling, RHA vice president, will take over as president next semester following the resignation of the former president.

J. Matt Wickless resigned as Residence Hall Association president during the association's last meeting Dec. 10, Mohling said.

Wickless, a sophomore business administration major, said he resigned to pursue other interests. Wickless said he will endorse senior Phil Gosch as the VISION party's candidate for president of the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska next semester.

"I felt his ideas were in the best interest of the people in the residence halls," Wickless said.

Wickless said he also will run as a College of Business Administration senatorial candidate.

Wickless said he resigned because acting as president for RHA and endorsing an ASUN presidential candidate at the same time would be a conflict of interest.

John Gibson, Cather senator, also resigned his position in RHA.

Gibson, a sophomore arts and sciences major, said he will not live in the residence halls during spring semester and also will be running for an ASUN position with the VISION party.

Gibson said he will run for a position on the College of Arts & Sciences Advisory Board.

Mohling, a sophomore political science major, said she was sorry to see Wickless resign.

"I was upset because I thought J.

See RHA on 7

Survey finds more women stressed out

More men say they live the good life

By C.J. Schepers
Staff Reporter

More UNL men than women say they are relaxed and happy, according to a 1989 Student Health Survey.

Almost twice as many University of Nebraska-Lincoln men as women said they considered themselves to be in "excellent spirits." The UNL Bureau of Sociological Research surveyed 305 students during the 1989 spring semester.

And 30.1 percent of men said they did an "excellent" job coping with stress, compared to 16.7 percent of women.

But those figures do not necessarily indicate that men handle stress better than women, according to Margaret Eager, head of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Mental Health Clinic.

In fact, it might be difficult for men to admit that they're feeling stressed, said the psychiatric social worker.

"It's much more acceptable for women to admit they're under stress," Eager said. Society encourages women to express their emotions more than men, she said.

Not only did college men feel they handle stress better than women, but more than twice as many men (14 percent compared to 6.2

For your information...

results of a 1989 UNL Student Health Survey

Q: How have you been feeling in general? A: "excellent spirits" Male 14.7 Female 6.8	Q: What is your health status compared to two years ago? A: "better" Male 25.9 Female 34.6
Q: What is your ability to handle stress? A: "excellent" Male 30.1 Female 16.7	Q: How do you feel the stress in your life compares to your peers? A: "more" Male 46.2 Female 40.1
Q: How many days did you miss class because of illness in the last four months? A: "none" Male 56.6 Female 46.3	Q: Have you ever left or considered leaving the university because of health problems? A: "yes" all students 3.9

Andy Manhart/Daily Nebraskan

figures in percentages

percent) felt they had less stress than their peers.

Roughly equal numbers of men and women said they had more stress than their peers -- 46.2 percent of men compared to 40.1 percent of women.

The survey also indicated that the sexes respond differently to questions about health concerns.

Although women often are stereotyped as being overly concerned about their health,

Eager said, more women than men in the survey felt their health had improved.

When asked how they felt about their health now compared to two years ago, 34.6 percent of the women said "better" compared to 25.9 percent of men.

More than twice as many men as women said they felt their health was "worse."

Women were more likely to miss class

See STRESS on 3

Arson suspected in Selleck Hall fire

By Pat Dinslage
Staff Reporter

A fire in Selleck Hall forced about 60 students out of the 7000 Building of the complex and into sub-zero temperatures early Friday morning.

The fire, which started in the third-floor hallway, was discovered around midnight by Dave Linder, student assistant on the floor, after the fire alarm sounded, Linder said.

Linder put the fire out with an extinguisher.

William Baum, Lincoln deputy police chief, said the blaze was started when someone set toilet paper on fire.

Ina Lühring, Selleck complex program director, said damages are expected to be less than $1,000.

Damage was minor because the carpet did not catch on fire, Baum said.

"It's a minor fire to us, but we always try to check it out," he said.

The UNL Police Department is investigating the fire, Deputy Fire Marshal Steve Schneider said.

"It's first-degree arson," he said.

If the arsonist is a student, he or she will face a hearing by either the residence hall judicial board or the all-university judicial board, as determined by Doug Zatechka, UNL housing director and Carolyn Jakobsen, assistant housing director, Jakobsen said.

If the arsonist is a resident of Selleck, the person's residence contract could be canceled immediately, Lühring said.