this case through the courts," Landis said.

Spire said Landis is not included in the lawsuit because he is not on the payroll of a state university. Doane and St. Mary's are private colleges.

Landis did not say he agreed or disagreed with Spire. He said if the result of the case is that he cannot accept money for teaching, he will not.

Landis said he also will give up teaching at public schools if the court decides it violates the constitution.

"I think very highly of Sen. Conway, and I believe people who have the qualities it takes to teach are needed in the Legislature," Spire said. "But this case is an example of how the attorney general has the obligation to protect the constitution."

Conway said he will be disappointed if he is forced to give up teaching.

"I think it is very valuable that I can share my experiences with my students," he said. "I teach to my students about business, government and finance, and the information I give to them firsthand they normally couldn't get for three years until it was printed in a textbook."

Landis said, "Constitutional language is not clear. It will be very helpful to get the kind of direction this case will provide."

That will allow more students to see a doctor, she said, and the fees students pay to keep physicians at UHC will not be going to waste.

The UHC Dental Clinic has been charging $15 for no-shows for about a year, she said. Since then, missed appointments have been almost non-existent, Rizijis said.

Patients are told of the new policy when they make appointments, Rizijis said.

UHC also has hung posters to inform students of the charges.
