Campus Recreation sponsors sports trivia championships

Four students will compete for the all-university, know-it-all award when the finals of the Office of Campus Recreation sports trivia contest are held tonight.

Craig Christensen, relations director for campus recreation, said the competition will be patterned after the MTV game show, Remote Control. He said the contest will include four categories: baseball, football, basketball and general sports trivia.

Christensen said the contest's four competitors will begin by facing one another in a preliminary round.

The two winning competitors then will advance to a championship matchup.

Competitors will be asked a question and will be awarded 20 points if they answer it correctly within 30 seconds. If they fail to answer it, their opponent will be awarded 10 points if they provide the correct response within 15 seconds.

The four contestants include Chris Oerman, a junior from Craig, who is enrolled in the Teachers College; Gene Tingwald, an undeclared junior from Omaha; Chris Sheeren, a junior in the College of Arts & Sciences; and David Schwartz, a sophomore engineering major from Falls City.

Oerman, the competition's top seed, will face the fourth-seeded Schwartz in the opening round, while the second-seeded Tingwald will square off against Sheeren.

Christensen said the public is invited to attend the contest, which will start at 6:15 p.m. in studio three at the Nebraska Educational Television Network, 1800 N. 33rd St.

DN basketball team plays No Names in season opener

The Daily Nebraskan basketball team will open its season tonight by facing a bunch of No Names -- literally.

The DN, which is billing itself as the Rag Attack, will face the No Names at 10:35 p.m. on court four in the Lee and Helene Sapp Recreation Facility.

The DN's starting lineup will include guards Tim Hartman and Ryan Steeves, forwards Craig Wagner and David Fahleson, and center Dan Burke.

Nee says coaches, players won't give up, will try new lineup against Oklahoma

Nebraska men's basketball coach Danny Nee refuses to give up.

Nee said he isn't giving up even though his team has lost five of its last six games to drop its record to 7-10 overall and 0-4 in the Big Eight. Things do not get any easier for the Cornhuskers, as they travel to Norman, Okla., to face ninth-ranked Oklahoma on Wednesday night.

Nee said Nebraska needs to do an about-face in its fundamentals in order to salvage its remaining conference season.

"We feel the fundamentals are breaking down," Nee said during his weekly press conference Monday. "At times our fundamentals are not sound. That's the only way I can put it."

Nee said neither he nor his players are giving up on the rest of the season.

"This is not over," he said. "It's not over until we say it's over. It's never entered my mind that we can't get it done."

"I think (the players) are really trying. God, they're trying."

Nee said the Nebraska coaches are taking the same approach toward the Oklahoma game that they have taken toward any other contest. He said the only changes will be the benching of center Rich King and swingman Ray "Ice" Richardson.

Nee said senior Richard van Poelgeest will replace King because the 7-foot-2 junior has been struggling against frequent double-team competition. King tallied four points during the first half of Nebraska's 91-83 loss to Iowa State on Saturday at the Bob Devaney Sports Center.

Nee said Keith Moody will replace Richardson. He said Moody was inserted because he will give Nebraska an extra ballhandler against Oklahoma's trapping defense.
