

Sociology class available for fall

From Staff Reports

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln sociology department's course on the social effects of the Vietnam War isn't listed in the class bulletin. The Sociology of the Vietnam Experience, Sociology 398, will be taught by A.L. Marsteller, a teaching assistant in the department.

The class will explore how social and political decisions during the war affected its outcome, and why the Vietnam War has gained so much attention recently. To sign up for the course, the call number and other details may be obtained from the sociology department.

Gasohol

One of those resources is Nebraska's corn, a lot of which is used to produce gasohol, Coffey said.

Gasohol is a clean-burning and higher octane fuel than regular gasoline, he said, which helps control air pollution.

The fuel has a mixture of 90 percent regular gasoline and 10 percent alcohol, Coffey said.

Alcohol is a solvent that removes deposits left in engines by regular gasolines, he said.

The deposits get into fuel lines and spark plugs and can cause an engine to run badly, he said.

But alcohol can deteriorate gaskets in the engines of some cars, Coffey said.

Coffey said he hopes gasohol use at UNL will set an example to "all citizens in Lincoln and beyond" to use the fuel.

Lincoln woman dies at Sheldon Theater

From Staff Reports

A Lincoln woman died Tuesday night at the Sheldon Film Theater after what was apparently a heart attack, a police officer said.

Sgt. John Lustrea of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Police Department said police took the call at 8:03 p.m. Tuesday. Idella Schreking, 84, was taken to Lincoln General Hospital, where she was pronounced dead.

Faculty Chamber Ensemble music was scheduled to take place at Sheldon at 8 p.m. Tuesday, according to the UNL Premiere! Calendar.

Legislature defeats handgun bill

By Victoria Ayotte
Senior Reporter

A final attempt to pass a bill requiring a waiting period before purchasing a handgun was defeated Tuesday -- with the sponsor's approval.

Sen. Brad Ashford of Omaha said that although he feels strongly about the bill, he will wait until next year to reintroduce a handgun waiting period.

The Legislature already had voted on the bill twice, and failed to advance it both times, Ashford said.

"I respect the body's wishes," he said, because it considered the proposal three times.

Sen. Ernie Chambers, however, made the motion to consider the bill because he said senators should overrule the speaker's agenda and advance LB642 as they did several other controversial bills Tuesday. The bill originally was not on the agenda.

"I think it's fair to do this," Chambers said.

The bill has merit, Chambers said, because "the purpose for inventing guns was to kill," and requiring a permit and subsequent waiting period might deter some would-be crimes of passion.

Ashford agreed with that analysis.

"It's hard for me to understand how someone can be pro-life . . . and not support a short waiting period for the purchase of a handgun," Ashford said.

Sen. Elroy Hefner of Coleridge opposed the motion and said approving it would be different from the morning's successful motion to overrule the speaker's agenda and advance nine bills.

Two votes on a bill are different from none, he said.

Sen. Stan Schellpeper of Stanton opposed the motion for a different reason.

"All we're doing now is just wasting time," Schellpeper said, because only three days are left in the legislative session. "Let's go on to something that will be worthwhile."

The motion failed on a 3-16 vote.

Senators approved a motion by Sen. Tim Hall of Omaha to overrule the agenda and return to consideration of bills that were on Monday's agenda.

The Legislature passed over the first three of those measures, however, which deal with restructuring of higher education governance.

The restructuring proposals, LR239CA, LB1141 and LB1141A, are on the agenda today.
