Daughter's journey to uncover truth makes 'Music Box' compelling movie

By Julie Naughton
 Senior Reporter

"Music Box" stars Jessica Lange as a criminal lawyer set to try her toughest case ever -- defending her father against World War II crime charges.

Lange plays Ann Talbot, the daughter of a Hungarian immigrant. Her father is accused of being a member of a secret-service organization that committed heinous war crimes. She believes a terrible mistake has been made; it must have been a different Michael J. Laslo that committed these horrendous crimes against society.

Talbot ends up embarking on a journey toward truths for which she doesn't really want the answers. Her journey begins in a courtroom in Chicago and leads her to Hungary and back to Chicago.

Talbot's journey makes for a compelling film.

She is a caring woman, adored even by her ex-husband and her ex-father-in-law. She wants to save her father from being tried. He tells her that he didn't commit the crimes, and she believes him.

Talbot begins the process of defending her father, searching through reams of reports for proof that the charges are wrong, crying over the horrible things that the Nazis did to Jews living in Hungary.

At first, looking at Michael Laslo (Armin Mueller-Stahl), it is hard to believe that such an innocent, apparently God-fearing man possibly could box -- a music box that spent 30 years in a South Side pawnshop.

Lange is completely convincing as Ann Talbot. She was nominated for a Best Actress Oscar for her performance in this film, and it was well-deserved. Her Ann is real and concerned.

Mueller-Stahl turns in an icy performance as Michael Laslo, the man accused of these horrible crimes. Mueller-Stahl convinces the audience that he hadn't committed the crimes -- and then comes the startling climax.

Forrest, as the special prosecutor, also is very convincing. Shea is out for Laslo's blood -- and Forrest is persuading in this role.

"Music Box" is a seamless presentation and is a nearly flawless and very plausible story of the lingering aftermath of World War II.

Set against the backdrop of hauntingly beautiful music by the Hungarian State Symphony Orchestra, "Music Box" was filmed on location in Chicago and in Budapest, Hungary.

"Music Box" is playing at the Cinema 1 and 2 Theatre, 201 N. 13th St.

be accused of such horrible crimes. But small details and hints are dropped throughout the film and it becomes more plausible that he could have committed the crimes.

Realistic courtroom scenes add to the drama of this film. Talbot has to deal with Special Prosecutor Jack Shea, who wants to see her father deported and has to try her case before a Jewish judge named Irwin Silver.

She pulls excellent criminal law techniques, effortlessly outdistancing and explaining away Shea's large amounts of evidence.

And after her journey to Hungary, Talbot learns the answers to her doubts about her father's innocence in a music organized crime ring known as "The Foot," which entices young runaways to commit their thefts for them, with cigarettes and video games and a really rad skateboarding ramp. The skateboarding scenes are as bitchin' as those of any turtle movie.

And when the Ninja Turtles meet up with "The Foot" for the climatic confrontation, the slam-bang fighting sequences make for a lot of fun.

"Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" will appeal to kids and adults for very different reasons. Adults should see the movie with somewhat lowered expectations. Flicks like this are a bit like eating cotton candy and pizza for breakfast -- not particularly good for you, but fun to do once in a while.

"Turtles" is showing at the Plaza 4, 12th and P streets.
