Racquetball

Having started at the end of the spring semester, this is the newest of the club sports. A benefit, in addition to instructions and techniques on the sport, is an updated phone list for members' use whenever they want to play and are looking for a partner.

Troy Huffman, largely responsible for the club's conception, said other projects also are in the works, including hosting tournaments, setting up a video library on the sport and the use of camcorders to tape practices so members can see their flaws.

An annual fee of $10 is charged for membership into the Nebraska State Racquetball Association.

Huffman can be reached at 464-3763, or contact Gregg Grosshans at 477-7362.

Rugby

Men's: This sport is for all builds and speeds, and students don't need football experience to play, according to Brian Chaffin, club president.

"There's a spot on the field no matter the size," Chaffin said. "It's open to everyone, and there are no cuts."

Every member plays, he said, even if that means dividing into two teams or playing an extra, shortened game.

Intramural games keep non-varsity students active

Whether it's innertube water basketball or mud volleyball, incoming University of Nebraska-Lincoln freshmen are invited to get their feet wet in the upcoming fall intramural season.

Out of the 150 intramural programs scheduled for next school year, about 25 are scheduled during September and October.

Some of those activities include slow-pitch softball, co-recreational flag football and soccer. In addition, there are individual activities like frisbee skills, hackey sack, horseshoes and badminton.

"Most people have played a varsity sport or intramurals in high school and would like to continue to do that," said Kenda Scheele, assistant director and coordinator of intramurals. "As well, many student aren't able to play on the varsity level here. Intramurals gives them a chance to continue playing."

Individual events usually do not require advanced registration, as students may show up the day of the event to register.

For team sports, students must sign up before the registration deadline set by Campus Recreation. Those dates will be set early in the fall semester.

On Aug. 30, Campus Recreation will hold its annual meeting in the Nebraska Union. Students are invited to attend and ask any questions they might have about the upcoming season.

The start of some competitions have been tentatively set. Sept. 5 is the date for a punt, pass and kick competition, while Sept. 6 has been set for cross country competition. Mud volleyball and innertube water basketball tournaments are set for mid-September and early October.

About 11 matches are set for the fall semester.

Dues for first-time players are usually picked by older players, Chaffin said.

Chaffin can be reached at 464-5204, or contact Mark Palmer, 474-2187.

Women's: Twice in the past, women's rugby teams here have failed. This club, which started last February, is going to survive, says Denise Taylor, team member.

The sport is physical, but Taylor urges those interested or with any questions at all to contact her. The team has enough to field a team, which is 15, but low numbers make practicing difficult.

There is no fee and no tryouts, Taylor said. If you practice, you play. Taylor's number is 477-1733.
