What's more exciting -- performing stand-up comedy at the Funny Bone in Lincoln or acting alongside Arnold Schwarzenegger in his latest movie?

Compare how Jason Stuart, a Hollywood, Calif., comedian playing the Funny Bone until Sunday, reacts to both, and it's kind of hard to tell.

"Lincoln? Oh, I just love Lincoln," Stuart asserts during a telephone interview from California. "It's like being in Mayberry . . . I landed at the airport and thought I was in someone's back yard . . . I saw Goober and Floyd and . . ."

And Schwarzenegger?

"Hmmm . . . he's very, very popular. Yes, I guess I can say that."

Stuart, a 31-year-old actor who started doing stand-up comedy at his manager's request, said he doesn't know a whole heck of a lot about "Kindergarten Cop," the Schwarzenegger movie he begins working on next month.

"It's about a kindergarten teacher who goes undercover and shoots people . . . I don't want to say very much about my part, but I do a very funny bit with a blow dryer."

"Kindergarten Cop," scheduled for release in December, is not Stuart's first movie appearance. He also will appear in "Eternity," a movie starring Jon Voight, premiering next month.

When he's not doing stand-up comedy or playing off-beat characters on network shows (characters like "Marty," a tough nightclub owner on NBC's "Sunset Beat"), Stuart said he likes to do a lot of charity work.

Stuart will perform on stage at the Funny Bone, 808 P. St., through Sunday.
