North will focus on offense

The North team, at times, will have a coach on-and-off the field at Saturday's 32nd-annual Shrine Bowl, which will start 1:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

Dick Stein of Chadron, who served as an assistant in the 1986 Shrine Bowl, is the North team's coach. Stein's son Kevin is one of the North's two quarterbacks.

"It's real special to have him here," Coach Stein said. "It's a real advantage not only because he's my son, but because I'm bringing my own quarterback with me who knows the system. And when he's your son, he's worked with you and knows the offense that much more."

"It's like having another coach out on the field. He knows the way I operate."

The North's other quarterback is Lans Brown of Blair. Stein, the coach, said both Brown and Stein, the quarterback, have "excellent arms."

Coach Stein, whose Chadron teams throw about four or five times a game, said the North was effective throwing the ball in its scrimmages. He said the North's game plan calls for more throwing.

"I think in this type of game you need to put the ball in the air," he said. "That's what the people like to see is the ball in the air, and it's a lot more fun for the kids to do at practice."

Besides, he said, "the running game is coming, but it's not where we want it to be."

By passing more, Stein said he hopes to see more offense at this year's Shrine Bowl.

"Most games are defensive struggles," he said. "We'd like to put a lot of points on the board, and we like to think we have the kids capable of doing that, but we haven't put in a whole lot of offense."

On defense at the team's training camp at York College, Stein said he was impressed with the capabilities of linebackers Ray Longo of Creighton Prep, Peyton Wayne of Omaha Burke and Nebraska-recruit Terry Connealy of Hyannis.

"We probably have three great linebackers that are very mobile and that helps defensively," he said.

Stein's assistants are Duane Spale of Grand Island Northwest, Dan McLaughlin of Norfolk and Mike McCabe of Atkinson West Holt.

The North lost 17-7 last year, ending a five-year winning streak.

Both team's exchanged films of last Sunday's major scrimmages. "We know the South's capabilities," Stein said.

South team plans to pass

If passing is the name of the game, so, too, could be turnovers.

Coach Marty Going said the South team expects to throw 40- to 50-percent of the time. In addition, North coach Dick Stein said his team was "passing really well offensively," and it also expects to throw regularly.

"Probably with the good chance of more passing, there is probably a good chance for turnovers, and that should make it pretty exciting," said Going, who worked as an assistant in the 1986 Shrine Bowl.

The 32nd annual Shrine Bowl game is 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Memorial Stadium. The South won the 1989 Shrine Bowl 17-7, which ended the North's stretch of five-straight victories.

Going, of Millard South, said both teams are implementing a passing game, probably because it is easier to establish than a running game.

"It's a lot easier getting a passing game in in a short period of time," he said. "There are probably some less timing techniques involved there."

He said the North's defense really will decide his team's ratio of pass-to-running plays.

"A lot of it depends on what the defense gives and what's working," he said. "Hopefully we'll find something that works."

Going said the team's strength lies in its defense.

"Our linebackers and defensive line, we're really good there, and I wouldn't trade Calvin Jones at running back either," he said.

Part of the South's running game will consist of Jones, a Nebraska recruit from Omaha Central, where he was regarded as one of the top running backs in the nation.

"I know players and fans enjoy the passing, but I think it would be fun if Calvin Jones broke a couple runs," Going said.

He added that the North has two capable runners in Greg Hays of Elkhorn and Jason Williams of Creighton Prep.

The South coaching staff, including assistants Ray Henning of Norris, Rob Hanger of Sutton and Marlin Terwilliger of Grant, did have a few pleasant surprises during its team training camp at Doane College in Crete, Going said.

Going said strong safety and wingback Matt Wibbels of Central City was "outstanding" during camp. He said he also was impressed with place-kicker and punter Ty Stewart of Omaha Westside.
