

Osborne

we were rated number one at the beginning of the season just because we had Vince Ferragamo returning," he said. "That was a very uncomfortable feeling because I knew we didn't have the horses to be number one."

"I don't quarrel with rankings, it's how we put it together, and you don't just do it with a quarterback."

In finding a replacement for Gerry Gdowski, Osborne said junior quarterbacks Mickey Joseph and Mike Grant share the top spot.

Two major scrimmages and one minor one will determine who starts against Baylor on Sept. 1, Osborne said.

Nebraska returns two starters--Tom Punt and Jim Wanek--on offense; both are linemen on the left side. And Osborne expressed concern over the number of injuries in that department.

Second string left tackle Terry Eyman will miss some practice because of a viral infection, second string right tackle Steve Engstrom has a sore hamstring, and second string right guard Erik Wiegert still is hampered by a groin injury that bothered him in the spring.

"We're kind of thin in the offensive line," Osborne said. "We've got some pretty big problems in the offensive line right off the spot."

The defense, with eight starters, is back solid, Osborne said, with the exception of depth in the defensive line.

"Defense may be the strongest part of the team in terms of quality and experience," he said.

Osborne also said middle guard Pat Engelbert, right tackle Kenny Walker and left tackle Joe Sims will give the Huskers a strong defensive front.

"Sims worked hard to improve his lean muscle mass," Osborne said. "He's always had pretty good speed, but now his agility might be a little better. Kenny we think may be one of the best pass rushers in the country."

Engelbert, he said, could turn out to be one of Nebraska's better middle guards.

Three of four starters return at linebacker, in Mike Petko and Pat Tyrance on the inside, and Mike Croel on the outside. All four secondary players return, in corners Tahaun Lewis and Bruce Pickens, strong safety Reggie Cooper and free safety Tyrone Byrd.

NOTES:

●Junior wingback Nate Turner is out six to eight weeks after breaking his collarbone in a non-contact drill during Sunday's practice.
