

Husker Fan Diagram the 13 essentials

Balloons: For the kid in us all. Everyone becomes a typical kid when they suddenly lose them. The strange thing is that everyone loses them at the same time.

Baseball cap: No one really knows why you need a baseball cap

Sunglasses: These are most important for the fans on the east side of the stadium.

Binoculars: Used most often to be able to see the guy /gal doing the backflips down by the sidelines. However, they are also useful in picking out players' numbers.

Cash: For the hotdog guy.

Mini TV: Useful for giving the fan a second chance to yell at the ref during the replay.

Underwear (red and white): These are strictly for postgame activities but one never knows if they will have time to change after the game.

Husker program: This is the Husker fan bible. Without it one tends to feel inferior for lack of statistical knowlegde when helping the coach out with advice.

Megaphone: This is the primary method of letting the referee know he should go back to Oklahoma.

Red blazer (or white in a pinch, goes best with red and white striped polyester pants): Useful as camouflage for when you start the cup war. It makes it more difficult for the cops to pick you out.

Flask: To mix with the Coke. This is used to both keep the chill off and to keep you in good humor when the referee starts to go blind.

Boots (ankle high): These are imperative at the game so that no one will be able to slosh Coke/dip into your socks.

Most people choose two, three or four add on ingredients. They justifiably assume they are getting a full portion of that third or fourth add on. Unfortunately many pizza houses decrease add on portion amounts after the first one.

daVini's gives full portioning for each add on whether you get two items or ten. FRI. SPECIAL MINI 2-ITEM PIZZAS $1.99
