about past mistakes and embarrassments? The Caswell Life Editing System is just for you. Because it directly interfaces with your memory, this system "not only removes offending material from your memory, but automatically 'splices' your life back together for a seamless and superior version of a personal reality."

Finding it impossible to keep up with all the news of the world? It could be time to purchase "The Wide World of Everything," a videocassette documentary that "covers every subject known to man in a single one-hour show."

Those are only a small sampling of the products available in "Not Available in Any Store," which offers "96 BIG PAGES of Personal Fulfillment."

Composed largely of garish 1950s pulp magazine advertising send ups, this book is a farcical romp through the consumer-oriented unconsciousness of the nuclear family.

The advertising style is familiar to all of us who collected comics in the early 1970s: cheesy art, "authentic" letters from satisfied customers, the appeals to fears of inadequacy and all the rest.

Dead

the ironic twist of its predecessor. That's the only real surprise here, so the question then is not "Why do a remake?" but rather "Why see it?" This new batch of creeps is

Most of these ads are directed toward adults, so convenience and conformity seem to be the cardinal values. Do it yourself, do it quickly, do it at home, do it better than your neighbor: these are the themes that still move a country.

Other sample items, none of them short on satire, include:

- Stewart Goodlife Lenses, "the one and only contact lens that filters out poverty and the poor from your field of vision, leaving only pleasing people and objects to contemplate."

- The Noveltron, which "lets a person be a novelist without writing a single word!"

- The Man-On-the-Street-Institute, which will "train you to provide the hackneyed opinions and sentiments that local and network news reports are crying out for."

Divided into sections like Life-Management Accessories and Interpersonal Activity Enhancers, these are products that call out to us from old detective magazines or 3 a.m. advertising on UHF stations.

For a classic collection of satire and humor in which reality and the advertised life are often confused, seek this catalog of the products we all secretly desire but which, alas, are "Not Available in Any Store."

good for a few screams, but people who still aren't acquainted with "The Dead" are better off taking their cash to the video store.

If curiosity gets the best of you, though, the new "Night of the Living Dead" is playing at the State Theater, 1415 O St.
