sion with donations, she said.

Oldenettel said canned goods, including meats, vegetables and fruits, would be especially useful in addition to new and practical Christmas gifts, such as sweat shirts, socks, underwear, backpacks and fanny packs.

The mission's Gift-Away Program is for people of all ages, not just children, she said. Gifts for teenagers are especially needed this year, she said.

Oldenettel said, thanks to year-round donation programs, the mission has many coats, hats and mittens to hand out this year.

"Come January, though, it might be a different story."

Mission staff also are accepting blankets and quilts to give to families, she said.

"We have 160 to date, but they dwindle fast," she said.

Oldenettel said the mission will have dinner available for the homeless and their loved ones on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

She said if students really want to help they can "bring us all the food they can get their hands on... and remember that need has no season."

The need in the summer is actually greater, she said, because people aren't as generous then.

"It's just as uncomfortable when it's 100 degrees as it is when it's 30 degrees outside."
