Coach: Swimmers ready for tough Brigham Young

By Benji Greenberg
Staff Reporter

With a nationally ranked team coming to the Bob Devaney Sports Center this weekend, Nebraska women's swimming coach Ray Huppert expects a little enthusiasm out of his team.

The 19th-ranked Cornhuskers entertain No. 25 Brigham Young in Nebraska's fourth dual meet of the season. The Huskers are 3-0 in duals.

"This should be a great meet this early in the season and in order for us to be successful we must keep our dual meet attitude of having plenty of spirit," Huppert said.

He thinks the Huskers are ready for BYU.

"Every meet we compete in during the season is a buildup to the end of the year," he said. "I believe this weekend we'll swim very well and I feel the swimmers are physically ready to swim fast.

"Every meet is important and none more so than this weekend's."

BYU will be tough because they are an experienced team and are led by K.C. Klein, the nation's premier backstroke, Huppert said. Along with Klein, the Cougars have two excellent divers in Vanessa Bergman and Courtney Ellson, he added.

Nebraska is in good shape for the dual, Huppert said.

"Everyone's in the water and were finally getting healthy," he said.

Husker assistant coach Kathy Nordell says that a win against BYU is an important one as far as sending a message to the West Coast that Nebraska should be respected.

"So far this season we've fared very well considering we're young with not a lot of experience," Nordell said. "But our consistency will come with our improved maturity and a win this weekend will carry us into next semester on a positive note."

Sophomore sprinter Chris Frederick said going against BYU is another opportunity to knock off a ranked team.

"We've done pretty well and we're beating ranked teams left and right," she said. "This weekend will be another chance for us to showcase our talents."
