sive."

After the speeches, the people broke up into three groups to discuss their worries with representatives of Nebraska Democratic U.S. Sens. Bob Kerrey and James Exon and Rep. Doug Bereuter, R-Neb.

Among those speaking to Kerrey's representative was Maxine Buell, whose son is in Saudi Arabia. She said if people disagree with the U.S.

presence in Saudi Arabia, they don't have to be silent.

"Politicians say that if we are not agreeing with what they are doing, then we are not patriotic," she said. "I detest that."

Pulos said movements such as Friday's rally could have an effect on the president.

"I think George Bush is watching the public's temperature," he said. "He's gauging this very carefully. He doesn't want to get into a war that will be unpopular."

State and Lincoln chapters of the United Nations Association and Nebraskans for Peace, Early Warning!, Ecology Now, the World Peace Center and Citizens for Palestinian Self-Determination sponsored the rally.

Peer

Ivy League schools — Brown, Cornell, Harvard, Penn, Princeton and Yale — are AAU members.

Griesen said the AAU is smaller and more selective than other organizations, such as the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

UNL is a member of that organization, as are all Big Eight universities. No Ivy League schools are members.

"We pride ourselves on our identity as an AAU school," he said, adding that it was natural for UNL to choose other AAU universities to make up its peer group.

The AAU, he said, is "a little more focused toward graduate research" than groups such as the association of state universities.

Only two schools in UNL's peer group — Iowa State and Nebraska — are not ranked as Research Universities I by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. The foundation releases periodic rankings of research schools based on doctoral degrees conferred and federal grants received. Research University I is the highest ranking.

The three Big Eight schools in the peer group also are missing from the National Science Foundation's list of top 39 research schools, based on spending for research and development in the sciences. All eight non-

Big Eight schools in the peer group are on NSF's list.

UNL is second-to-last among its peers in library resources, as ranked by the Association for Research Libraries. It comes in 10th on total enrollment, according to U.S. Department of Education figures.

Griesen acknowledged that UNL probably is not at the midpoint of its peer group, but said it is not an "aspiration group." He called such criticism unfounded, especially in the area of faculty salaries.

Although UNL lags behind in many areas, it ranks well in others. Its tuition is among the lowest of the peer group schools, and its student-faculty ratio compares favorably with many of the schools.

an athletic department stipend, donations from football fans, tax revenues and the foundation athletic department fund, Grant said.

In 1990, he said, the band received an operating fund of $62,000, which has been used for both the marching and concert bands.

Future funding has been the topic of ongoing discussions with Jack Goebel, vice chancellor for business and finance, Grant said.

Goebel said that for the past nine years, people interested in the band have gathered every October to discuss funding problems.

Interested people include the band director, the president of the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska or a representative, the coach of the football team or a representative, the sports information director and other faculty members, Goebel said.

When the group met last October, Goebel said, the band didn't foresee funding problems, but as the bowl game approached the band realized it would lack funds.
