

Students pick: Pizza, tacos, yogurt . . .

A survey will be conducted this week to help determine what will replace the Pizza Bakery in the Nebraska Union, a Union Board member said.

The Union Board is conducting a survey of 500 University of Nebraska-Lincoln students, beginning with a booth survey today in the Nebraska Union.

Among the board's priorities is to fill the space currently occupied by the Pizza Bakery with something that will benefit students, said Colin Theis, a Union Board member.

"The student survey results will have a huge impact on what goes in" the space currently occupied by the Pizza Bakery, Theis said.

The Pizza Bakery is expected to leave the union by the end of the week, he said. Theis said the decision to leave was not based on financial problems.

The survey is designed to discover students' concerns and attitudes about the services the unions offer, while making them aware of some services they may not have used yet, he said.

A similar survey conducted by the Union Board last year helped it decide what renovations were needed for the Harvest Room, now called Fast Break.

Students surveyed will be asked what their food preferences are at the unions.

"We're thinking maybe pizza, Mexican food, ice cream or yogurt — something that's going to be favorable to students," Theis said.

The survey also will ask students why and when they visit the unions, and if they're aware of the extra services that are available through the University Bookstore.

They will be given the opportunity to rate the services they have used at the unions.

About 250 responses will be gathered from the booth surveys.

A phone survey will be conducted on Wednesday to obtain another 250 responses. The board will choose which students to survey randomly from names in the student directory.

The next Union Board meeting will be 5 p.m. Tuesday. Students can attend to offer input on the survey questions or voice concerns, Theis said.

"I was 17 years old. I was extremely naive. The recruiters got ahold of me so fast. But they only tell you as much as they want you to know," Hanna said.

"They tried to make me think life was worthless. I just respect life too much."

He said he would refuse to serve even within the United States.

"That would be still supporting the war machine. I'd be handing them the gun and saying, 'Go kill.'"

Hanna is supposed to report to Fort Leonard Wood on Thursday. Until then, he and his supporters are striving to gain as much recognition for his cause as they can. A vigil took place in support of Hanna's efforts Sunday night, and a press conference is planned for 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Cornerstone.

Films' topics racism, African descendants

UNL will kick off Black History Month with a satellite presentation of "Beyond the Dream III" on Thursday in the Nebraska Union's Regency Room.

The presentation from noon to 2 p.m. will reflect on the struggles and accomplishments of African descendants from the future perspective of 2041.

World leaders in politics, business, education and the arts will participate in the videoconference to offer solutions to world-wide problems of people of African descent.

The presentation will be free. Another satellite videoconference, called "The Rise in Campus Racism," will be presented Feb. 20 from noon to 2 p.m.

Both broadcasts will be made available for future use in classrooms or other settings through the Affirmative Action office.

stone Ministry, who supplies information about how the draft system would work, possible exemptions from service and how to obtain them, said he didn't know if all the publicity was the right approach.

"My own feeling is that that would just make the military touchier — and his fate is in their hands," Doerr said.

John DeFrain, a UNL professor of human development and the family, supports Hanna's efforts.

"Our greatest fear is that Gary will report and they'll give him the forms (to apply for conscientious objector status), and then whisk him away on a plane for Saudi Arabia. . . . We've heard reports that some of them (people who have applied for exemption) are disappearing. No one knows where they're taken; no one has any contact with them.

"Sure, he's afraid of dying," DeFrain said. "But he's more afraid of not living by his principles. And that makes life a lot harder."

Housing director: Costs expected to rise in '90-'91

University of Nebraska-Lincoln housing costs are expected to rise $195 per student for double-occupancy rooms next year, the director of university housing told the Residence Hall Association on Sunday.

Presenting the 1991-92 Residence Hall Rate Study, Doug Zatechka said the major causes of the increase are salary and benefits increases for permanent staff members and student employees, a 10-15 percent increase in utility costs, a cable TV rate hike in the halls and higher food and telephone service costs.

To keep the rate increase to a minimum, the Division of University Housing has made cuts in capital purchases, professional travel, overtime and student positions. It also has increased employee meal charges, single-room rates and vacation housing rates.

Housing rates would have increased nearly $300 without the budget reductions, Zatechka said.

"I know it isn't cheap," Zatechka said, but "comparing to peer institutions, we're way cheaper than the Big 10 schools."

Zatechka said he didn't think the higher rates would make some students choose off-campus housing.

"I don't think they can get by cheaper," he said.

Another cut being considered for next year is the removal of phones — but not phone service — from residence hall rooms. The phones in use now should be replaced, Zatechka said, but that cost could be avoided if students are required to bring their own phones.

"It's just not a good year for students," Zatechka said. "Costs are just rocketing."
