that's won championships in three different schools, that's been coach of the year in three different conferences . . . he brings all that experience.

"Then he gets the quarterback that he can control who happens to be his son, and it makes for a great team."

And a balanced one. After Houston's scoring, Oklahoma State's four other starters average a combined 41 points per game.

"They've got great chemistry," Nee said.

But Nebraska will try to break that unity, guard Jose Ramos said.

"We're going to have to protect our home court advantage against them," he said. "It pumps you up when you go out there and see it's standing-room-only, the fans waving the little white towels.

"It's a great atmosphere, a great college environment," Ramos said.

NU gymnasts to meet ISU

By Erik Unger

Nebraska and Iowa State have women's gymnastics teams going in opposite directions.

The Cornhuskers are undefeated while the Cyclones are 0-2. The teams will meet Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Bob Devaney Sports Center.

Two injured Nebraska gymnasts, CeCe Ocel and Shane Foster, have returned and are growing stronger while two injured Iowa State gymnasts are out for the season.

Cyclone Brecke Houston, a two-year letter-winner from Omaha, has a knee injury and Kristin Moore injured both elbows.

That leaves the Cyclones with only one senior, co-captain Janelle Emerson, and two juniors, Lisa Boekeloo and team leader Kathie Jo Kindler.

Despite this, Iowa State scored 187.1 at home against Oklahoma. Nebraska's best home mark is a 185.25 scored in a victory over Missouri last Sunday.

Nebraska coach Rick Walton said Iowa State is similar to the Huskers on the beam and floor and has the same weakness — the uneven bars.

But, Walton said the Cyclones do more twisting on the vault, which can help accumulate points.

Walton said the Huskers spent the first two days this week working on moves to add difficulty to their routines and the rest of the week inserting the moves into individual routines.

Walton said he hopes the increased difficulty and a healthier squad will push his team over 190.

Walton said intrasquad competition on the beam and uneven bars has increased, so he expects a couple of lineup changes.

Iowa State coach Mike Sharples said he has a lot of respect for Nebraska's program and is expecting a tough match.

"I don't see a weak gymnast on the (roster)," he said. "Nebraska has a ton of talented freshmen."

sophomore Lisa McGill (13.8 ppg, 7.7 rpg), average more than 10 ppg.

The win at Missouri will help the Huskers on Sunday, Beck said.

Beck said the Huskers would concentrate on taking the Cowgirls out of their transition game and shutting down senior guard Liz Brown.

"Every player is going to have to come and perform," she said.

PRACTICE roundup

Women's basketball: Coach Angela Beck said that although her team is tied for first in the Big Eight, the attitude isn't one of overconfidence. "We're in control right now," she said. "But the players don't want to quit or give up."

Men's gymnastics: When the Cornhuskers travel to Columbus, Ohio, this weekend to compete against Ohio State, the team will have some new twists, Coach Francis Allen said. "We changed some routines to ones the guys are more comfortable with. It's done the team a lot of good," he said. . . Wrestling: Coach Tim Neumann said the team has done more live wrestling this week to prepare for the Big Eight Championships on March 3. "We're training right through this weekend's dual with Oklahoma and the rest of the duals this season for the Big Eight," he said.

SPORTS BRIEFS

NU swimmers face stiff competition

Women's swimming coach Ray Huppert said he likes his team to have the challenge of competing against ranked opponents. The 23rd-ranked Cornhuskers will face 15th-ranked Arkansas on Saturday in Fayetteville, Ark.

"We seem to swim our best against ranked opponents," Huppert said.

The Nebraska men's swimming and diving team will compete today through Sunday in the Southern Illinois Invitational in Carbondale, Ill.

Coach calls gymnast winner

By Todd Cooper
Staff Reporter

Nebraska men's gymnastics coach Francis Allen said he knows he has a winner in freshman Dennis Harrison, one comparable to a couple of former Olympians.

"He's so aggressive," Allen said. "There are just some people who may not do well in practice and then can perform great in meets. Jim Hartung and Scott Johnson were that way, and I think Dennis is, too."

Hartung and Johnson were Cornhuskers and Olympic gymnasts.

Harrison said that comparison may be a bit premature.

"It's a big honor, but I don't know if it's real just," Harrison said. "I mean, you're talking about two of the greatest Olympians the United States has ever had."

Besides, Harrison isn't completely healthy. He underwent arthroscopic surgery on his shoulder three days after the Big Eight Invitational in November. Harrison injured the shoulder during a training camp this summer.

"It's been more of a pain in the butt than anything," Harrison said. "It's been frustrating — knowing that you could be performing better than you are."

But Harrison hasn't performed all that bad since the surgery. Last week, Harrison was third in the all-around at the Big Eight Invitational — behind Nebraska's Brad Bryan and Che Bowers — despite the shoulder, Allen said.

"It was my first all-around since the surgery, so I was happy," Harrison said.

But Harrison probably was most pleased with his performance at the USA championships this summer. The Omaha freshman was 22nd overall in the competition that included some of the best collegiate gymnasts in the nation.

"I was the highest performer just out of high school," Harrison said. "That really helped me here — just knowing that I didn't fall apart during the competition."

Harrison said the youthful Huskers (four of the top six gymnasts are freshmen) have relied on meets like that during their first season at Nebraska.

"No one's inexperienced here," Harrison said. "We've all either competed at the Gym Nationals or the Senior Nationals. And the seniors (Brad Bryan and Ted Dimas) let you know what to expect at meets like this one at Ohio State."

Harrison said the Huskers anticipate a "good, but not great team" at Ohio State.

"This meet will be a good measuring stick of where we were at and where we want to be for Minnesota."

Minnesota, last year's NCAA runner-up behind Nebraska, comes to Lincoln Feb. 9 — Nebraska's first home meet of 1991.
