Watching Johnson, he could be an effective player next season. He's strong, he's quick and he has a variety of moves. He was missing all of his outside shots the exact same way, meaning that with a slight correction on another day he would have hit all of those shots.

For negatives, at 5-foot-11 he's awfully short, and he didn't demonstrate the quickness and explosiveness needed to make up for his lack of height. That partially could be explained since the teams were playing on a short court. And I didn't have to guard him, either. He may seem quicker and more explosive when you're trying to keep him away from the basket.

Johnson is in the same position Ramos was last year. Ramos was the highly touted point guard, coming in to rescue the Huskers. As everyone by now knows, by the time Ramos was eligible, the Huskers didn't need rescuing.

And that was good for Ramos. He came in and was a solid player, but no one mentioned him for All-American honors.

I hope Johnson is allowed some time to adjust, too. He'll probably begin the season as a backup, which should give him time to grow, playing 15-20 minutes a game instead of the 25-30 he would have to play at some other schools.

But that's next year. Until November, he won't be playing much organized basketball.

Tonight he will, as the Hosers take on Beta Theta Pi A in the All-University final.

I'll probably be there, as a spectator.

Wolforth says competition helpful

By John Adkisson
Staff Reporter

Nebraska softball coach Ron Wolforth is a firm believer in stiff competition.

That is why he and his 5-2 Husker softball team are embarking on a 10-day road trip that starts with the Bud Lite National Invitational Softball Tournament today in San Jose, Calif.

The tournament, which includes ranked teams like No. 8 Iowa and No. 15 Central Michigan, is what Wolforth called a real test for his team.

"Our goal down the road is to win the Big Eight," he said. "And the only way for us to improve is to play against the type of competition we'll see this weekend."

Nebraska will open the 16-team, pool-play tournament against Eastern Michigan tonight, then play Iowa and Santa Clara on Friday. If the Huskers win two of those games, they will advance to the championship pool to be played Saturday and Sunday. Wolforth said Iowa and Central Michigan are both excellent teams.

"But I have every reason to believe we can be competitive with them," he said. "Both Iowa and Central Michigan are similar to us in that they like to run."

Santa Clara, although not ranked, concerns Wolforth as well.

"We play them last, and to be honest, they scare me," he said. "They're going to have a little of a home advantage, and our players may want to look past them."

No. 5 Arizona State, which beat the Huskers 2-1 earlier this season, is also in the field and the two teams could meet again if both advance to the championship pool.

In the Huskers' last game, in the Houston Invitational last weekend, they lost 3-1 to Southwest Louisiana. Nebraska committed four errors and played poorly, Wolforth said.

Wolforth also is concerned with his team's offensive production. The Huskers have scored only 2 runs in their last two games, and have only two players (outfielder Misti Guenther and catcher Kris Vucurevic) hitting over .238 for the season.

"When you're scoring one run per game, you're not going to beat many teams, no matter who you're playing," Wolforth said. "That's my biggest concern."

After the Bud Lite Invitational, Nebraska will continue its road trip by playing doubleheaders at Santa Clara March 26, at Alephi March 28 and at San Jose State March 30.

Wolforth said in the long run, the hectic road trip will pay dividends for his team.

"We're going to be playing a lot of games, but it's going to make us a stronger team later in the season," he said.

SPORTS BRIEFS

NCAA regional semifinals start tonight

The NCAA men's basketball tournament will continue with four regional semifinal games tonight.

In the Southeast Regional in Charlotte, N.C., top-seeded Arkansas, 33-3, will play Alabama, 23-9, at 6:40 p.m. Indiana, 29-4, will play Kansas, 24-7, 30 minutes after the end of the first game.

In the West Regional in Seattle, Arizona, 28-6, will play Seton Hall, 24-8, at 7:10 p.m. Top-seed UNLV, 32-0, will face Utah, 30-3, 30 minutes after the first game.

Non-televised football to begin earlier

Non-televised Nebraska football games will begin at 1 p.m. next year, instead of the 1:30 p.m. starts in past years, athletic director Bob Devaney announced Wednesday.

In a press release, Devaney said Nebraska, in doing this, is following a Big Eight trend. Another reason cited for the switch was the increasing length of games.

Goats tie Huskers in men's rugby

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln men's rugby club tied the Omaha Goats 10-10 Saturday on East Campus. UNL led for most of the game, but the Goats tied the game with about 10 minutes left.

Nathan Borchers and Matt Tupper scored for UNL, with Mark Palmer making a conversion.

UNL will compete this weekend at the Great Plains Collegiate Championships. The winner this weekend will go to the Western Union Collegiate Championships in April.

Bowling teams advance to championships

Both the University of Nebraska-Lincoln men's and women's bowling teams finished second in their region this weekend and will advance to the Intercollegiate Bowling Championships. Wichita State's teams won in both groups in Topeka, Kan.

The national meet will be held April 17-21 in Columbus, Ohio.

The men will try to defend their national championship won last year in Portland, Ore.

UNL junior Jennifer Wilson was the top individual woman in the tournament with a 214 12-game average. Junior Kim Berke had a 204 average.

For the UNL men, senior Paul Fleming had a 223 average, Larry Stepp Jr. had a 222 average and Randy Wilson Jr. had a 204 average.

Basketball in the halls?

Bruce and Beta Boys, two three-on-three teams, play basketball in the link at Architecture Hall Wednesday night during a tournament sponsored by the American Institute of Architecture Students. Bruce won the game, but Harley's Hogs won the tournament, defeating New Pair of Shoes, 35-30.
