dictionary also defines the word white as reflecting all human brew and as innocent. The definition of black is that it is of no light, colorless and dark-skinned.

To overcome these lies, Parker said, students need to question what is being taught to them.

But, he said, they should not believe what he says simply because he said it. "I'm a 10th-grade dropout — a truant, and I'm lecturing you... You shouldn't take anything for face value. Go out and do the research yourself. Prove me wrong if you don't agree," he said.

Coffey said the 9th Street option "improves traffic for a substantial number of people."

Construction will begin in late 1992. Detours are not yet known but will be required under any of the options.

pass the law other states will follow, when they follow the government will pay attention, and then the NCAA will feel the pressure and change the rules."

Chambers has had many requests from other states' legislators for copies of the Nebraska bill, and he said he believes such interest will cause the NCAA to act more swiftly.

"I hope they (NCAA) will see the light and address the issue in a meaningful way."

The law that goes into effect in July does not change rules or interfere with a legal investigation, but when the NCAA decides to investigate a coach or athlete, it must be fair, Chambers said. The NCAA must make the charges "crystal clear" to the person involved, he said.

Chambers said the accused should be able to confront and cross-examine the accuser. If the accused is not allowed to approach the accuser, Chambers said, it is easy for charges to be manufactured by an anonymous informant.

"The NCAA must show specification of the evidence and present the negative facts. If a negative decision is reached, no person reviewing the case before should continue on with any further action," he said.

UNL 'flatfoots'

Police department to increase number of foot-patrol officers

Students will be seeing more UNL police "flatfoots" patrolling on campus next semester in an effort to improve safety, an official said.

Ken Cauble, University of Nebraska-Lincoln police chief, said that more officers patrolling campus on foot next semester is "top priority" for the department.

Next semester, Cauble said, he hopes to have an officer on foot 24 hours a day in 8-hour shifts.

Bill Plummer, a student member of the Police Advisory Committee, said the committee voted Thursday for a policy to place a walking officer on campus.

"I've never ever seen a UNL police officer patrolling campus on foot," Plummer said.

But Cauble said that officers currently patrol different areas of campus on foot at random times. Officers patrol heavily populated areas, such as the library, during the day, he said, and parking lots at night.

Plummer said an increase in foot patrolling is needed.

"It makes sense that officers and students see each other as human beings and interact with each other not just when they're stopped or pulled over," he said.

Cauble said some problems stand in the way of increasing the number of foot patrol hours on campus.

The police department has a limited number of officers, he said. But if two positions currently open for officers are filled, he said, the department will have more officers available for foot patrol.

The department may not be able to fill the positions, however, he said, because of potential state budget cuts.

Cauble said extra officers in cars also are needed to quickly respond to emergencies.

But, Cauble said, an increase in foot patrol will occur regardless of whether the positions are filled.
