Freshman Kerri Paulsen was among 40 flag twirlers who auditioned near Kimball Hall for the 1991-92 Cornhusker Marching Band at band camp Sunday. Auditions began in April with about 70 twirlers and will be narrowed to 32 performers.

UNL police pick up new computers

By Lori Stones
Staff Reporter

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln Police Department is adjusting to a new computer system that should help officers be more efficient, according to a police sergeant.

Sgt. John Lustrea said the new system, which went into effect Aug. 1, contains basic incident and case reports.

Lustrea said the system allows officers to "make more efficient use of time" by providing quick reference to case numbers, names and license plate numbers.

Thus far, he said, the only disadvantage to the system is that a few officers aren't skilled typists, making speed a problem.

Once familiar with the system, he said, the officers should find it "very easy, ... designed to be user friendly."

The computers also will ease the preparation of crime statistics, he said.

Before the system was installed, he said, officers had to compile the information for statistics by hand.

Now students who want to know about crime statistics will be able to obtain the information over the phone, he said.

The system was fairly inexpensive, Lustrea said, because it is connected to the mainframe computer in the parking department. The police had to purchase just three terminals to operate the system.
