Jim's Journal

Today Steve brought
a couple of friends
over.

One of them saw
Mr. Peterson and said, "oh, look,
a kitty! He's so
cute!"

They stayed around
a few minutes,
then left.

After they left,
Mr. Peterson sat
by the door like
she wanted to go
out too.

Jim's Journal

At the copy store
today I was
just cleaning up
stuff around the
floor.

I had to empty
the trash, too.

It was really
sunny outside,
and with all the
windows in the
copy store, it was really bright in
there.

I looked at Hal,
who was helping a
customer. The sun
was shining onto
the back of his head
and his ear looked bright orange.

JIM IS BACK

Jim's Journal

Today I was
lying on the floor,
relaxing.

I was looking
at the ceiling,
imagining what
life would be like
if the world was
always upside-down.

Mr. Peterson came up to me and
sniffed my face.

I could feel her
tiny breaths, and
her whiskers tickled
my face.

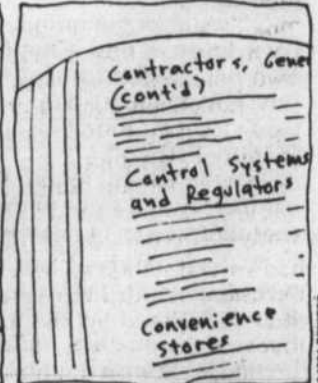

Jim's Journal

looking up some
place in the phone
book that I had to call.

while I was flip-
ping through the
yellow pages I got sidetracked and
just started
looking at stuff.

Jim's Journal

"Everybody in the whole world has
a CD-player except
me," Tony said
today.

He listed some
of the people he knew who had
CD-players

He said he wanted
to buy one this
Friday, at a place
that's having a
sale.

"What the hell
is this cat's
problem?" he said.
