Confidence

ball," Carmer said. "The second one just floated there."

Wilhite also preferred his first interception, also against Utah State.

"We were in a man-to-man coverage and it just made me feel like I could cover a guy if I need to," Wilhite said.

Wilhite said he needed that confidence since he is playing his third position in as many years.

He earned Junior College All-American honors at Dodge City (Kan.) Community College as a quarterback. Last season he was moved to wing-back and redshirted. Now he is a corner-back.

"I was very nervous," he said. "The Utah State game) was my first game. I sat out a year, switched positions, so I was worried."

But Saturday's game alleviated some doubts, not only for him, but for the defense as well, Wilhite said.

"We just wanted to go out and show them that we weren't what they labeled us to be (after last week)," Wilhite said.

Both Huskers agreed that the defense made up for the performance against the Aggies. The Huskers gave up 373 yards passing to Utah State.

"It hurt — giving up 300-some yards passing is not going to make you feel good," Carmer said. "But we came together as a group."

As a unit, the defense was hoping for four interceptions Saturday, Carmer said. They got three.

After Wilhite and Carmer's interceptions in the first half, Jamie Weyers intercepted a pass in the fourth quarter and returned it 50 yards.

"And I think Travis Hill had one that was without a doubt an interception," Carmer said.

Hill was ruled out of bounds after intercepting a Colorado State pass at the Rams' 45-yard line.

Regardless, Carmer said Nebraska was back on the right track Saturday.

"This game helps a lot going into Washington, especially on the defensive side of the ball," Carmer said. "We realized some things and it gave us some confidence."

But, should the Huskers lose, Carmer said, that confidence won't be destroyed.

"It's our first big game of the year," Carmer said. "If we would happen to lose, I know this year we wouldn't go into a shell like we did last year."

"And if we win, we just keep the momentum."

Memories

The chances of a win over the Huskies are not the best, given the fact that Washington throws the ball often, not to mention extremely well.

So don't get into a deep depression after Washington spoils your Saturday night. If anything, early-season losses seem to wake Nebraska up.

In both 1982 and 1988, the Huskers responded to these losses by blowing out respectable opponents the next week.

In both seasons, Nebraska beat Oklahoma to win the Big Eight championship and a trip to the Orange Bowl.

But a word of caution: Don't be overly excited if Nebraska should happen to knock off Washington.

Sure, it will be a shot in the arm for the program and Nebraska might gain some national respectability back. And you won't have to wake up depressed Sunday morning.

You can just save the depression for the morning after the Oklahoma game.
