I played pool with Tony again today.

9-23

Whenever he would make a shot, he'd say, "Alright! That was somethin', eh, Jim?"

But when he'd miss several shots in a row, he'd say, "Geez, what's wrong with me? This is ridiculous!"

While we were walking out of the pool hall, he said, "Pool is just the coolest sport, isn't it?"

I said I thought it was okay.

Orchesis

The group meets and practices every Thursday from 8:30-10 p.m. Currently, members bring in short pieces that they have choreographed and share them with other members.

In November, Orchesis will begin putting together this spring's performance. No theme has yet been chosen, but Rupert said the show would represent many styles of dance, including ballet, tap, jazz and modern.

"I'd like to see a little of everything this year, whatever ideas people can work out," said Rupert. "Musical accompaniment is also welcome if someone has an idea they would like to develop."

After last year's success, Rupert said Orchesis will present its show for three nights this spring. Admission will be $2 for the general public or $1 for UNL students with I.D.

Although Orchesis members choreograph all their own pieces, most of the group's members are not dance majors, according to Rupert.

Rupert's only experience before joining Orchesis was a semester of ballet and a jazz class in high school, but she has been able to expand through her involvement with Orchesis.

"All are welcome to join Orchesis," Rupert said. "It is open to all, whether you have much or little experience."

Jim's Journal

Today I bought a rotating thing for the microwave that runs on batteries.

I heated up some beans and watched them turn around slowly on the rotating thing.

They started bubbling after a few seconds.

After they were done and the oven turned off, I kept watching them turn around for a while.

Today I went walking around with Steve.

We walked through a vacant lot next to some train tracks.

Steve was throwing pebbles, trying to hit various things.

"People should throw rocks around more often," he said. "It's a lot of fun."

JIM WHO?

Jim's Journal

Tony came by today.

I thought he'd want to play pool, but he said, "Ah, I'm sick of pool."

We ended up watching the news on TV.

Tony pointed at the newscaster and said, "Get a load o' that guy's hair!"

I went walking around today.

I walked by a big corporate headquarters of a bank or something.

They had patches of grass and some potted trees in a big cement area by the main entrance.

I sat there for a while and watched people with suits and hard shoes walk briskly in and out.
