

Women returning champions Coach expects good season

By Erik Unger
Staff Reporter

The Nebraska women's bowling club should roll to another successful season, according to Coach Bill Straub.

The defending national champions return two senior All-Americans in Kim Berke and Jennifer Wilson and two other starters. Wilson also is the 1991 state amateur champion.

"We will be as good as last year, if not better," Straub said.

The club should be ranked No. 1 in the preseason poll yet to be released, he said.

The women's team will be helped by a strong recruiting class that includes twin sister transfers Shelley and Carrie Machuga from Erie Community College in New York, and Jan Hendricks, a senior transfer from Wichita State.

Ray Kozoil, the club sponsor, said all three of the newcomers should step right in and contribute to a team that averages 180 as a team. A score of 300 is a perfect score.

Straub said the men's team is going through a rebuilding year following the loss of All-American Paul Fleming.

Fleming led the Huskers to a No. 3 ranking in the national polls last season and competed on the national championship team two years ago.

Straub said the men's team, with only two seniors, will be inexperienced this season.

"We have two or three guys vying for a couple of spots," he said. "We are concerned with a couple of holes we have to fill."

The team is led by seniors Randy Wilson, of Lincoln and Tom Kretzler of Albany, New York, both of whom average more than 200.

Straub said he expects both teams to be playing on ESPN again for the national championship this year. "Both teams have a good shot," he said.

Both teams will open the season at the Brunswick Collegiate Team Match Games Tournament in Denver, Oct. 18-19.

institutional control, recruitment violations and infractions from an assistant coach no longer with the program, Buzzard said.

The Oklahoma State football team was not allowed any games on television for two years, three years without a bowl game, three years with a scholarship reduction of five and three years with recruiting visits limited to 50. 1992 will be a probation year, Buzzard said.

Clark said it has been difficult working through the team's problems.

"As a senior, I have to let everybody know that there will be good and bad times," Clark said. "We have to strive to better ourselves and try to get a victory."

NU football players still recovering

From Staff Reports

Coach Tom Osborne said Kenny Wilhite, reserve cornerback, strained a shoulder Tuesday and was held out of practice Wednesday. He said he isn't sure if Wilhite will be able to play Saturday against Oklahoma State.

I-back Scott Baldwin practiced some but will probably need another week to recover from the sprained ankle he suffered on Sept. 7 against Utah State, Osborne said.

Mike Stigge, punter, has been out the last two practices with the flu, and Osborne said he hopes he will be ready for Saturday's game in Stillwater.

speech." Although Jones has gotten his chance to play right away, his chance to start may not come until later in his career. Jones is listed behind sophomore Derek Brown, who is second in the Big Eight in rushing and is considered a Heisman Trophy candidate by USA Today. But Jones said he isn't going to worry about it.

"A lot of programs (have two quality backs)," Jones said, mentioning former Nebraska 1,000-yard rushers Mike Rozier and Roger Craig who played on the same team. "It doesn't bother me too much, it just makes the two of us even better because we are pushing each other."

"I just want to help the team out as best as I can, and if that means cheering them on from the sidelines than I'll do it."

Jones said if the time comes when he's needed to start, he'll be ready to play.

"If I have to step up, then I'll step up," he said. "Whatever the team needs then, that's what I'll do."

Jones, who grew up watching Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears, at 5-foot-11 and 210 pounds has been described as a big, punishing back.

His up-the-middle running ability is different from that of Payton, whose ability to make tacklers miss earned him the nickname "Sweetness" took him to the top of the NFL rushing charts.

But Jones said he needs to wait until the Big Eight season to find out about his running style and ability.

"I haven't gone through the Big Eight yet and I heard it is really competitive," he said. "I'm still learning and the Big Eight has All-American candidates, so that will really test what kind of a back I am."

Jones still has plenty of time to make a name for himself on the playing field, but when asked what he wanted most out of his career as a Husker, it wasn't a Heisman Trophy, a 1,000-yard season, or even a national championship — things which would give him recognition.

"It would be my degree," Jones said. "I could not be able to play after I leave here. If you don't have that degree, then your football has been wasted, and actually your four or five years that you've been here has been wasted."

Kicks

"It does chance the complexion of the game," Young said. "When a team misses an extra point, there's a lot of strategy involved on both sides."

Proponents of the two-point conversion have advocated that the ball be moved from the current 3-yard line into the 2 1/2-yard line to entice coaches to go for two. The underlying principle is that it will make the game more exciting.

Young isn't so sure. "I've also heard they want to move the ball back on two-point conversions," he said. "It's fine where it is."

If the two-point line of scrimmage is moved up — or moved back — it may not be as exciting as this year's extra point escapade. Fans can now actually anticipate a kicker's try for an extra point instead of leaving the stands for popcorn or a Coke.

And should the ball go through the uprights, maybe some of those kickers will actually get the PAT on, or off, their back.
