

UNL students win theft ruling

Auto repairman guilty, judge says

By Wendy Mott
Staff Reporter

After nearly two years of litigation, a decision has been made in favor of two former University of Nebraska-Lincoln students.

More than 20 months ago, former UNL students David C. Schroeder and Kurt Broer brought charges against Judson Cushing, former owner of Judson Automotive at 601 N. 27th St., allegedly charged the men for parts that had never been replaced.

Deputy County Attorney Dave

Stempson said a decision was reached Wednesday that found Cushing guilty of both counts of theft by deception.

"Basically (Cushing) said he put parts in and did things to the cars that he didn't really do," Stempson said.

Cushing faces a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $20,000 fine, Stempson said. Cushing is scheduled to be sentenced Jan. 24.

Whether Broer and Schroeder will be reimbursed depends on the judge's decision, Stempson said. He said Broer was charged $985 for parts for his Porsche 911 that never were replaced, and Schroeder was charged $450 for false parts replacements for his Porsche 911.

"If Cushing goes to jail," Stempson said, "they won't get their money back."

Another UNL student, Katherine Tabor, has charged that Cushing refused to return her car when she would not pay him for unauthorized repairs. Cushing will be tried separately for the felony theft allegation.

Currently, Cushing is out on bond and is believed to be living in Colorado, Stempson said.

"He went out of business shortly after all this came down," he said.

Stempson said he heard a number of complaints about Judson Automotive when Cushing was first arrested, but said only three complaints have gone to trial.

It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe.
You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter's dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

If Galileo had used Vivarin, maybe he could have mastered the solar system faster, too.
