said. "But next spring we are going to try to have a regular schedule for all the Big Eight teams."

Although no men's Big Eight volleyball conference exists, Big Eight volleyball clubs plan on having a championship in April.

"One of our major goals is to get a varsity endorsement," Macy said.

The Nebraska Athletic Department budget has been tight, he said, but team members hope to get enough publicity and recognition to get enough fans interested.

"We want to try to make an official proposal, hopefully after next year," he said.

Macy said about 100 universities had established men's volleyball clubs across the country. And another 30 universities classify men's volleyball as a varsity sport, he said.

"The Big 10 has very well-developed clubs, Ohio State and Penn State have already developed a varsity sport," he said. "Those are the steps we are trying to progress to."

Although varsity endorsement is a major team goal, other business must be taken care of, Macy said.

"Our biggest goal is to be competitive and to win most of our matches," he said.

The Nebraska club has finished 29th and 30th out of 70 teams at the National Collegiate Volleyball Club Championships in the past two years.

"A top-10 finish would be great," Macy said.

But that may not be so easy, he said, because the team faces financial problems.

"We get approximately $1,500 from the university," Macy said. "That money goes to entry fees, uniforms and equipment."

"A lot of times, gas money comes out of our own pockets."

To raise money, the club plans to produce a poster, play exhibition matches at high schools and hold a children's clinic.

The next match for the 3-4 Nebraska team is against Kansas at 7 p.m. Friday in the Lee & Helene Sapp Recreation Center.

Sports doldrums set in

Chuck Green

From about the middle of January until the beginning of Cornhusker spring football drills in March, the sports world is pretty dead, as far as Nebraska is concerned.

People can follow the winter Husker sports teams, but none can generate the attention and pure passion that Nebraska's football team does from Omaha to Scottsbluff.

Because of that fact of life, the mind of many a Nebraskan turns to mush when it comes to sports. A reminder is needed now and then to help people realize that there are indeed other sports in the world besides the one that is played at Memorial Stadium six or seven Saturdays a year.

So, with that in mind, crack open a beer, rustle up some phlegm, scratch yourself and take this little quiz. No answers will be at the end. If you don't know the answer, well, look it up.

After all, the sports page is your friend.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Husker football stars to play Hoops game

Nebraska's Karen Jennings has been named the Big Eight women's basketball player of the week for her performance in last week's games against Kansas and Kansas State.

Jennings scored 62 points, including a school-record 48 against Kansas State. She also pulled down 27 rebounds.

This is the sixth time Jennings has been named player of the week

— a Big Eight record. It was the third time she was honored this year, matching the record for the most honors in one season that she established last year.
