

Abstract lyrics mingle with music perfectly

Reviews

A.R. Kane
"Americana"
Warner Bros. records

Mix New Order's techno-pop sound with P.M. Dawn's abstract lyrics and you have A.R. Kane.

The band's new release, "Americana," is sort of a greatest-hits compilation of songs dating back to 1988.

Alex Alyuli, (the A in A.R. Kane) and Rudy Tambala (the R), both were born in 1963. They went to school together and grew up together, and both knew what they liked and didn't like.

What they liked included Miles Davis and Jimi Hendrix and "Reggae dub." The jazz feel of Davis and lyrical style of Hendrix both are echoed in the band's music. But in a 1988 interview, Alyuli said he couldn't listen to any rock 'n' roll — especially early rock 'n' roll.

This band is a far cry from be-bop. Its sound is very much like London industrial dance-club music.

A monotonous baseline and amazing keyboard sounds are the basis for most of the group's songs. The best song on the album is called "A Love From Outer Space." It's a very danceable track — kind of like New Order with a twist.

The lyrics fit the music so perfectly that it's hard to distinguish between the two. The words are almost chanted and hidden beneath the sound of the keyboards.

Alyuli and Tambala describe their sound as "dreampop."

This is a very accurate definition. A.R. Kane's "Americana" is a must for anyone who likes to dance or is into the feel of abstract music.
