college students, and viewership is rapidly growing.

"We've sold more than 200 'Ren & Stimpy' T-shirts to a mostly 18- to 24-year-old audience," said Brian Schur, owner of Cosmic Comics. Schur said that a Ren and Stimpy comic book was being planned.

Although the store now has T-shirts in stock, Schur said he wasn't sure how long that would last.

"Both orders we've received have sold out within 24 hours," he said.

so much entertainment then."

In those days, of course, a projectionist was in every projection booth.

It seems some things never stop changing.

Today Dale is part of a vanishing breed, the movie-house projectionist. More and more theaters are moving to automation.

"It's good for the bosses," Dale said, "they don't have to pay (a projectionist)."

But what happens is that some brave or outraged soul must get up, leave the theater and accost the guy in concessions who doesn't know anything about projection and looks terrified to boot.

"There's nothing worse than having to give them their money back," Dale said.

But as long as Dale, or someone like him, is on the job, you can rest easy.

"I've never had to give any money back," he said, because in a theater with a projectionist, accidents or problems with the film are solved in a matter of seconds.

There's nothing like the human touch.

And there's nothing worse than yelling "Focus! Focus!" to an empty projection booth full of unheeding, inexorable machines.

Mad Max biker type, so he wears black leather and rides a Hog. Johnson is the Marlboro Man so he's a drifter, smokes reds and wears big cowboy hats.

Together they decide to save their favorite hangout from bank repossession. Their solution is less than original—they rob the bank. Through the robbery they stumble into a drug ring, which of course, puts them up to their ears in organized crime.

The movie is replete with the fights, chases, shoot-um-ups and babes required of a contemporary action/adventure film. (Available 2/19)

"Don't Tell Mom the Babysitter's Dead" (PG-13) Christina Applegate, the jailbait star of Fox's "Married... With Children," stars as Sue Ellen "Swell" Crandall, a resourceful teenager who finds herself in charge of her four younger siblings.

Swell's Mom goes on vacation to Australia and leaves the kids at home with an elderly woman whose babysitting tactics aren't grandmotherly. Moments into the film, she's the victim of a fatal heart attack.

Swell decides to play house and not tell Mom what's happened. She creates a fake resumé and lands a job as an executive assistant in a fashion house.

After lots of predictable and unfunny mishaps, Sue Ellen gets a boyfriend, teaches her siblings some responsibility (and manners) and saves the company from financial ruin.

Applegate is not as bad an actress as expected but the story leaves much to be desired. Even adolescents aren't bound to find this funny. (Available 2/19)

"Body Parts" (R) When criminal psychologist Bill Chruschank (Jeff Fahey) loses an arm in an auto accident, his limb is replaced by one that comes from an unknown donor.

Slowly but surely, the limb develops a life of its own, slapping the good doctor's kid and trying to kill his wife. Chruschank does a little investigating and finds the arm came from an executed serial killer and his other body parts are running amok all over town.

Probably the most interesting thing about this film is that fact that it was banned from Milwaukee movie houses last summer after the Jeffrey Dahmer ordeal was discovered. (Available 2/20)

"Beastmaster 2" (PG-13) The Beastmaster (Marc Singer) has the power to command animals. His pets include a cuddly tiger and eagle.

As if one movie was not enough, in this sequel, he's up against yet more evil.

Warlord Arklon (Wings Hauser) and an evil witch (Sarah Douglas) travel through time into present-day Los Angeles in search of a neutron bomb. The Beastmaster is in hot pursuit.

Complete with bad hair, costuming and dialogue, Beastmaster 2 is a must for bad fantasy film connoisseurs. (Available 2/20)

"Trust" (R) This dark comedy is about two young people trying to find love in the midst of chaos.

Andrienne Shelley plays a tough, pregnant high school girl whose mother blames her for her dad's heart attack. Martin Donovan is an unemployed but brilliant computer whiz whose father blames him for the death of his wife in childbirth.

Writer-director Hal Hartley finds humor in unexpected places. Fast and funny dialogue may make this a favorite on home video. (Available 2/20)

"The Pope Must Diet" (R) British comedian Robbie Coltrane is David Albinizi, a rural priest stationed at an Italian orphanage, who happens to play a mean electric guitar. (Dubbed by guitar master Jeff Beck.)

Through a clerical error, Albinizi is installed as the new pope. But the Mafia has its own man in mind for the job, and its inside man, who heads the Vatican bank, is out to make the Pope's reign very short.
