Nebraska's Travis Grant strains to the finish line of the 100-meter dash Saturday at the Nebraska Invitational. Grant won the race with a time of 10.65.

of course, the coaching staff was great. "Also, my high school coach was born and raised here, and he said it's a great place to get an education without a lot of distractions. I did get tricked about the weather, however, since I came to visit in the spring."

Grant was just 16 when he came to Nebraska. Because of that, he said, he used to get teased a lot.

"In my first couple months of school, guys on the team would call me 'Kid Skid' since my nickname is 'Skid,'" he said. "They would tell me I couldn't even get into the bars on Kiddie Night. Things like that."

"The guys pretty much sheltered me from everything. Mark (Jackson) and Jerry (Marsee) were like big brothers to me. I hung out with them and trusted them."

Gradually, Grant began to trust everyone else on the team as well. He said the team unity was incredible.

"Every individual event is like a brother or sister to another event," he said. "For instance, the distance runners are like our brothers and vice versa and your own event is your immediate family."

"Also, college teams are composed of high school superstars, so it's not like there's one person so above everyone else that they get special treatment. Everyone is good, so they respect each other's abilities."

Now that Grant is in his second season, he said, everything is starting to work out fine. There is one thing he needs to work on, though — his start.

"In the races I've run so far, the competitors in my heat have always been very quick starters, especially (Husker teammate) Stephen Golding," Grant said. "I'm not known as a great starter. But if I can improve on it — and get out even with these guys — I can beat them, because I'm a much better finisher."

"I'm getting better now at just sitting in the blocks and listening for the gun and still get out quick. Stephen has really helped me a lot with my start."

Right now, Grant said he was best suited for the 200-meter dash, mainly because of his strength in running the curves and his strong finishes. In fact, he wants to give the 1992 Olympic Trials a shot.

"For one thing, there seems to be a noticeable difference in my times every year, even from meet to meet," he said. "I know it's a long shot to make the team in '92, but I think '96 is something really legitimate."

"In fact, I probably would be disappointed if I didn't make the team in '96 if I keep training the way it's going now."

With these goals in mind, Grant said, he would keep pushing himself to do better.

"Right now I am pleased with my accomplishments in the sense that I'm ahead of where I was at this time last year," he said. "But after every race, you always know there are things you could have done to make the time better."

Carnesecca calls it quits at St. John's

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Carnesecca retired as coach of St. John's on Monday, a month before his enshrinement in the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The 67-year-old Carnesecca stepped down after 24 seasons at St. John's, a school he took to postseason play each of those years and the only college at which he ever worked.

"It's going to be very difficult to put the ball down, but the time has come," he said at a packed news conference. "There are two reasons, really. I still have half of my marbles and I still have a wonderful taste in my mouth about basketball. It's a difficult decision, but it's all mine."

Carnesecca jumped into the national spotlight with the creation of the Big East Conference.

His teams led by Chris Mullin and Walter Berry may not have earned him as much notice as did his penchant for sweaters and his ability to run and jump on the sidelines like a man 20 years his junior.

Carnesecca retired with a career record of 526-200. His teams produced 20-win seasons 18 times. St. John's reached the Final Four in 1985 when three Big East teams advanced to the national semifinals at Lexington, Ky.

"I thought hard about it the last couple of weeks. I had to give it serious consideration," he said. "Hey, I'll still be here. I'm just going across the street."

Carnesecca will stay on as an assistant to the President for community relations.

"We hope Lou will serve as our ambassador to New York City," said Rev. Donald J. Harrington, the school president.

"Things can't last forever," Carnesecca said. "The league will go on and prosper. Why? Because of the players and the special relationship the schools have with each other."
