"The area we anticipate improvement in is setting, as both Nikki and Christy (Johnson) need to raise their level of play and they should be able to do that," Pettit said.

Nebraska's non-conference schedule this season includes traditional powers Pacific, New Mexico and Pittsburgh in September's First Tier Invitational; defending national champion UCLA and Southern California in the Big Eight-Pac 10 Challenge; and the Big 10-Big Eight Challenge against Illinois and Ohio State, the team that knocked the Huskers out of the NCAA tournament last year.

Pettit said the difficult non-conference schedule would allow his team the opportunity to compete against the best teams in the nation, even though it might mean additional losses for Nebraska.

"If our philosophy was 'Let's win eight or nine matches real quick to build up confidence,' we wouldn't be doing that," he said.

Pettit, who is Nebraska's winningest volleyball coach, said the Huskers' schedule wouldn't get easier when the Big Eight season begins.

"The Big Eight is stronger," he said. "Oklahoma returns the most physical team, Colorado will be a very good team and Kansas will improve and be a team that can compete with the top three teams," Pettit said.

The Huskers, ranked seventh in Volleyball Magazine's preseason poll, will move back into the NU Coliseum for their season opener Sept. 1 against the Nebraska Alumni.

Nebraska played last year in the Bob Devaney Sports Center due to renovations to the 66-year-old Coliseum.

Huskers face difficult schedule, including UCLA, Pacific, Texas

The Nebraska volleyball team's schedule isn't just dotted with big matches every now and then.

There's a biggie every week. "It's a typical Nebraska schedule," said Cornhusker volleyball coach Terry Pettit.

The Huskers, after an exhibition against a team of former Nebraska all-stars on Sept. 1, embark on a September schedule that has them playing three teams that beat them last season.

Pacific and New Mexico come to Lincoln for the First Tier Invitational on Sept. 4-5, along with two-year NCAA tournament participant Pittsburgh.

The next week, Nebraska will take its first road trip of the year — to Champaign, Ill., for the inaugural Big Eight-Big Ten Challenge.

Ohio State and Illinois, two teams both rated in preseason Top 20 polls, will face the Huskers in Champaign.

The Buckeyes knocked Nebraska out of the NCAA Tournament in a match in Lincoln last December.

After a stretch of Big Eight matches through most of October, Nebraska will play three more Top 10 teams when they face Texas at home and play UCLA and Southern California in the Big Eight-Pac 10 Challenge in Los Angeles.

Two teams in the Huskers' Big Eight schedule — Colorado and Oklahoma — also were mentioned by coach Terry Pettit as preseason Top 20 teams. Nebraska plays each of those teams twice this season.
