Democrats rally behind Clinton

While the Republicans were busy in Houston showcasing George Bush, the Democrats in Lincoln were doing some showcasing of their own.

The Lancaster County Democrats sponsored a "Rally for Change" Thursday to show support for Bill Clinton.

Lt. Gov. Maxine Moul urged a crowd of more than 100 Democrats to give the presidential candidate some of Nebraska's electoral votes.

Moul told rally participants their hard work could turn the tide of Republican support the state has shown in recent elections.

"Clinton and Gore are giving nothing to Bush and Quayle in this election... and we'll concede nothing to the Republicans in Nebraska," she said.

Moul told the crowd gathered at the Reunion, 16th and W streets, that the electricity generated by the Democratic National Convention would continue to run through the rest of the campaign.

She compared the parties' views of women by recalling the opening days of the two conventions.

The Democratic convention in New York opened by highlighting women officeholders across the country, Moul said, while the Republican convention in Houston opened with entertainment by the Houston Oilers cheerleaders in "skin-tight" uniforms.

Clinton's domestic policies of health care, family leave and women's rights should be trusted and elevated above the platform put forth by George Bush, she said.

"I don't think we can afford four more years of George Bush," Moul said.

handicapped accessibility, student convenience and employee comfort, will continue to be main priorities, he said.

Spanier mentioned Gov. Ben Nelson's request that UNL departments prepare for the possibility of budget cuts, but he was not specific about when or where cuts would be made.

He also called for tougher admissions standards, soon to be reviewed by the NU Board of Regents, which "are not intended to exclude anyone from the university, but rather to help students to succeed in higher education once they are accepted."

Spanier said UNL students, faculty and administrators must continue to work to improve cultural diversity.

"If we are doing our jobs and doing them well, then we need to be responsive both to the educational and social needs of our students," Spanier said. "We need to create an open, tolerant and sensitive learning environment for all. We must have the courage to build a harmonious, multicultural society, not because we believe it is economically and politically expedient, but because it is the right thing to do."
