by jazz artists such as Cannon Ball Adderley, Charlie Parker and bands Blood Sweat and Tears and older Chicago.

Although choreographing is not his strong point, he said, he probably will create one halftime show for the marching band this year to give Kloecker a break.

The biggest challenge of his job at Nebraska, Spainhour said, will be to write music that keeps up with the bands' level of musicianship.

He likes to use music that makes the bands work hard, he said, because it improves their playing and gives them a sense of satisfaction and achievement when they are able to master the music.

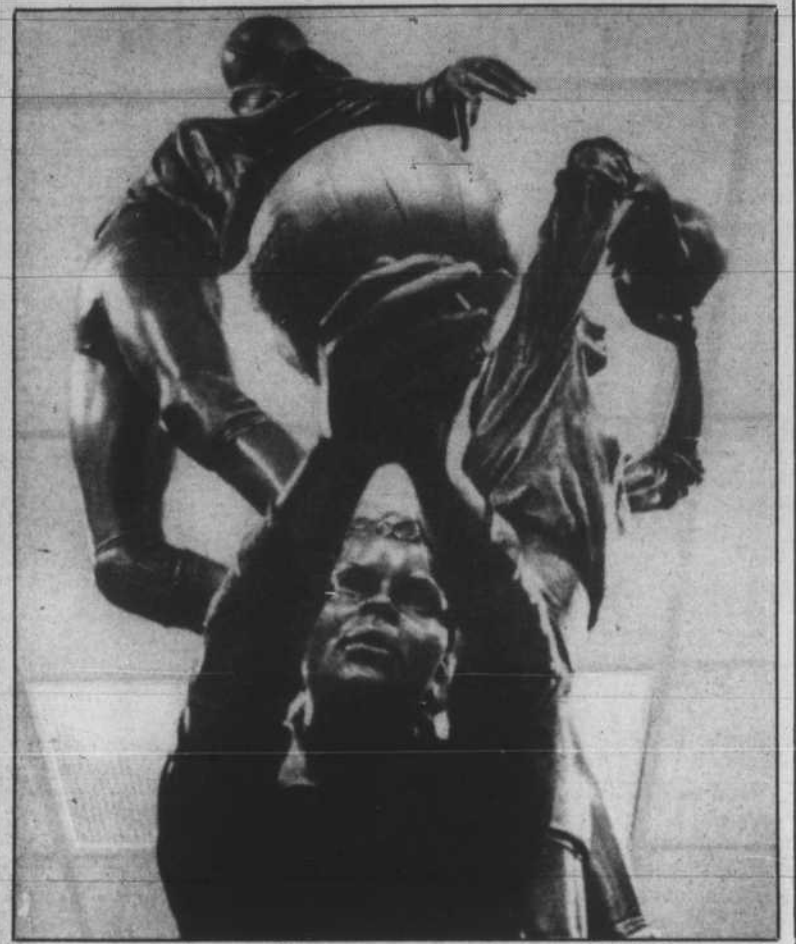

Still, Spainhour stressed that his work was small in comparison to that of students.

Away from work, he enjoys sports, especially tennis, and playing his saxophone.

While in Lincoln, Spainhour said he also hopes to perform some jazz gigs, but he admitted it would be difficult to find the time because of his rigorous performance schedule with the bands.

In the long run, Spainhour said he hoped to become a published music arranger and play his sax as much as he liked.

"Right now," he said, "I feel fortunate to be here."

Centrum

Successful business, he said, would make tenants want to stay in the building after the low-rent Christmas season.

"Our thought is that if the stores are successful, they will turn into long-term tenants," he said.

Irons said his offer already had a few takers.

A Native American craft store, an art gallery and a contemporary wooden furniture store have plans to move into the Centrum within the next couple weeks.

Irons said he mainly targeted college students as customers in the renovated shopping center.

For instance, he said, his plans included transforming the lower level of the Centrum into an entertainment center. That plan was launched last week with the opening of the Cactus Club, a country and western bar.

A 9-hole miniature golf course also has expressed interest in the deal, he said, and a video store and fast-food restaurants are other candidates for the remaining open spaces.

The upper level, he said, would be filled with retail stores. Irons said he had contacted Banana Republic and the Gap about his deal, but the clothing stores had not yet responded to his offer.

Irons said he still had about 10 spaces to fill, and he was open to suggestions from students.

"Students are really important," he said. "I hope to be able to provide a place where they can hang out and do things and then stay and shop upstairs."

It's also hard to believe that you get free software when you buy HP 48 calculators.

There's a lot more than a great calculator waiting for you when you purchase an HP 48SX or an HP 48S between June 1, 1992, and October 31, 1992. You'll get a bonus book that's good for free software, a free PC link cable and hundreds of dollars back on applications—like electrical and mechanical engineering—memory cards, training tools, games, and HP's infrared printer.

It's a really big offer. Worth more than $500. And it's going to make your HP 48 calculator even more valuable to you. The free serial cable lets you exchange information with your PC. And the free software disk lets you enter and plot equations easily, do 3D plotting, and analyze polynomials.

Beyond all the bonuses, you'll have the right calculator for your most challenging classes. HP 48 calculators have over 2100 built-in functions and offer a unique combination of graphics and calculus.

Head over to the campus bookstore now. After all, you don't see this kind of deal every day. HP calculators. The best for your success.
