Nee said one of the keys to beating Oklahoma State was to control Reeves inside the paint.

"Bryant Reeves is a factor — he's probably one of the most improved big men in the country," Nee said. "He's a wide body, he's fundamentally sound and they have really focused on him."

Another problem for the Huskers could be Gallagher-Iba Arena. Despite holding only 6,381 fans at capacity, the facility is considered to be one of the most difficult places to compete in the country.

Nebraska forward Bruce Chubick said playing in Stillwater could be intimidating.

"It's one of the toughest to play in — mainly because the crowd's right on top of you," Chubick said. "They could literally spit on you anywhere you are on the court, and I'm not so sure they haven't tried."

The Huskers dropped to 11-4 overall after a defeat in their conference opener last night at Oklahoma.

Nee said he'd consider Nebraska's trip to the Sooner State a success if they could leave Stillwater with a victory.

"A split would be just super," he said. "If we played .500 ball in the Big Eight on the road, we'd be in fat city."

But after Oklahoma State's 75-62 loss in its conference home opener against Kansas State last weekend, Nee said his team had to be ready for the Cowboys.

"I know they're going to be committed and very focused," Nee said. "I can't imagine them thinking about losing two in a row at home."

the Huskers' confidence back up after their loss to the Cyclones.

"Everybody wrestled well," Neumann said. "Wrestling is so much mental, and right now we're better than we were at Las Vegas (Invitational)."

Nebraska will have a chance for redemption against the Cyclones at the National Duals in the second round, Neumann said.

"It should be a lot better match," he said. "Both teams should wrestle better."

Jennings, who is 97 points away from taking over the all-time scoring record for Nebraska, scored a career-high 48 points in a game last season against Kansas State.

"(Kansas and Kansas State) will most likely focus on Jennings but she still needs a solid performance," Beck said. "Other players also have to contribute on the offensive end."

Nebraska guard Meggan Yedsena may reach another Husker milestone this weekend. The junior guard needs just 10 assists to break the Cornhusker all-time record of 445.

Offense hasn't been a problem for the Huskers this season. Nebraska is averaging 83.8 points per game and is leading the Big Eight in scoring.

"Our offense has been very productive," Beck said. "We need to concentrate on defense and rebounding to win both games this weekend."

Beck said the matchups to watch in the Kansas game will come in the middle. Nebraska forward Sara Offringa will guard 6-foot-2 Jayhawk center Angela Aycock, who is averaging more than 17 points per game.

The Huskers, who fell out of the Associated Press Top 25 this week, are still getting the respect they deserve, Beck said.

"Although we may have lacked a little confidence before, we have too much now," Beck said.
