the graduate students would be gone. More expensive full-time instructors would have to pick up the course load.

John Peters, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, said his college could not absorb the proposed cuts without suffering severe damage to all departments.

He said the public doesn't understand the consequences of deep cuts in UNL's budget. He said Nebraska needs to invest more in all of the university's programs.

Joan Leitzel, senior vice chancellor for academic affairs, said the administration was not considering dropping classics or speech communications.

But, she said, "If the heaviest cuts go through, we don't know what we'll do."

He said ASUN had done a better job in getting the word out this year by having a sign-up sheet in the ASUN office all semester.

"That's the first step," he said. "Just get your name on a list."

The problem is that few students take the initiative to get involved, he said.

Massey said he feared even fewer students would get involved this year because of the new election rules eliminating spending limits in campaigns.

Last year's presidential candidates could only spend $3,500.

Massey said unlimited spending would scare off students who think they don't have enough money to run.

Piper said even the $3,500 limit last year was too much. ACTION spent $1,000 campaigning.

But Sigerson said spending limits were one of the barriers that contributed to students' apathy. Eliminating limits would allow candidates to develop more contacts with students.

The ASUN electoral commission's decision to lengthen campaigning periods and allow candidates to begin campaigning in January also should help candidates get their ideas out, he said.

acted. But Bath said she believed there was little opposition to the bill.

Witek said she supported the bill, as well as multicultural curriculums.

"It's not that I'm opposed in any way to multiculturalism," she said. "I've made that clear on the floor."

Witek said she expected the bill to be equally successful in select file.

"It has a lot of support," she said. "People are telling me, maybe more should be done to the bill, but we have to let the program get started."

Parking permit price to increase

ASUN approved a 7.5 percent hike Wednesday

Students, faculty and staff face a 7.5 percent price increase in parking permits the next two years after ASUN members approved Wednesday the Parking Advisory Committee's 1992-93 budget.

Students will pay an extra $2.22 next year for the services of Campus Recreation, the Nebraska Unions and the University Health Center.

The parking increase, about $5 for most permit holders, is intended to go to projects that would benefit students, ASUN President Andrew Sigerson said.

"The $5 increase sounds like a lot of money, but it's earmarked for students," Sigerson said.

The increase will pay for commuter parking lots on east and city campuses, PAC officials said. The lot on city campus would also help to alleviate the estimated 35 to 50 percent of parking spaces that will be taken from students in Abel and Sandoz residence halls, they said.

Faculty at the Beadle Center for Biological Research will use those spaces after the center's completion, officials said.

Some members said they were concerned the money would not go toward student needs, but Andrew Peshek said fellow senators should trust PAC.

"They can't guarantee, but they did keep their promise last year," Peshek said, referring to PAC's improvements in student parking and safety.

The Association of Students of the University of Nebraska also approved continuation of the safety surcharge originally added last year. The surcharge will help pay for increased lighting on both campuses.

Members also completed budgetary legislation with the approval of Fund B allocations from University Programs and Facilities Fees.

Students paid $163.11 this year for Fund B fees and will pay $165.33 for the 1993-94 school year.

One dollar of the increase will go to Campus Recreation's repair and improvement budget, which pays for maintenance of recreation fields and facilities.

Sigerson acknowledged the need for the increase, but said he was against it because of promises to students to keep their fees from increasing.

Campus Recreation's operating budget will also receive 63 more cents per student. The Nebraska Unions will receive an extra 59 cents per student. The University Health Center did not request an increase and students will pay the same as last year.

The student body approved a teacher evaluation bill and a parking lot condition bill.

The teacher evaluation bill recommends that all university departments implement questions regarding classroom atmosphere and racial and gender sensitivity into teacher evaluations.

The parking lot condition bill, which originally called for ASUN members to fill potholes with materials of their choosing, was amended. The amendment changed the bill to state that ASUN will work with Parking Services to quickly eradicate safety hazards like potholes.

he said.

Piper said COMMIT, the winning party last year, called press conferences to emphasize their clean campaigning techniques, but not to talk about the issues affecting students.

But Sigerson, COMMIT's presidential candidate, said his party's focus on the topic led other parties to clean up their act.

"Past elections have been downright dirty," he said.

Parties would rip down posters and accuse one another of breaking elections rules, he said. But this kind of campaigning was nonexistent in last year's election.

Past candidates agreed that creating a more diverse ticket might increase student interest and help to avoid mudslinging, but finding students who were willing to run wasn't easy.

Massey said he would have loved having less-represented students, such as off-campus students and minorities, on his ticket, but none volunteered to run.

posed Wednesday, was designed to remove the penalties that could face school districts if they failed to develop a multicultural curriculum. Witek withdrew the amendment before a vote could be taken.

Marilyn Bath, representative of Sen. Dennis Byars of Beatrice, said some senators had made it appear as though there were people opposed to the bill. The main concern, Bath said, is about how the bill would be en-

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller
a lot of Macintosh for an affordable price.

The best investments start with inside information.

Built-in video support lets you add up to a 16" Apple display with 256 colors.

It runs over 4,000 Macintosh programs, which all work in the same, consistent, intuitive way.

A screaming 25 MHz 68030 microprocessor helps the Macintosh LC III computer run up to 50% faster than its best-selling predecessor.

Its internal disk drive comes in three big sizes: 40MB, 80MB or 160MB. So you can store lots of papers, letters, notes, ideas.

The new Apple Macintosh LC III.

Add up to seven external hard disk drives, scanners or other devices through the SCSI port.

A built-in SuperDrive disk drive reads from and writes to Macintosh- and MS-DOS-formatted disks.

4MB of RAM is standard. For complex graphics or engineering programs, you can even expand your LC up to 36MB.

When you know what we've built into the new Macintosh LC III computer, its low price tag looks even better. It's the successor to Apple's top-selling personal computer—the Macintosh LC II. And it has even more speed, power and flexibility. Plus built-in networking, built-in file sharing and more. See the new Macintosh LC III today by visiting your Apple Campus Reseller. Where you'll get special student pricing, as well as service during college.* And discover the power of Macintosh. The power more college students choose. The power to be your best.
