have your audience howling in no time and they'll love you for it.

"Gee whiz," you say. "What about fantasy? Can I play Dungeons and Dragons and still be a purist?"

You can't, but don't let me stop you. Just as long as you don't get carried away like one guy in Texas who took a D & D game for real and killed his entire group and then hid in a subterranean tunnel system. Don't start dressing like a troll.

Maybe reading Tolkien's "Lord of the Rings" once in a while is a good thing — all the names and places make you more appreciative of the low mental wattage needed to consume an ordinary Star Trek novel.

These are just a few notes to become a real, honest SF guru. If you follow them, and add a few of your own, maybe someday you'll get your very own newspaper column or fanzine to spread your wisdom. What's better, people will love you for it.

Sam Kepfield is an Arts and Entertainment columnist and has every Star Trek novel Pocket Books ever published (even the really bad ones).

Pornography

Last Sunday, the American Family Association ran a full-page ad in the Lincoln Journal-Star, asking for signatures and money to advance its cause.

They group asserts that movies such as "Basic Instinct" should not be made because they show "murders during orgasms." The point they seem to be missing is that "Basic Instinct" was not made for a 10-year-old. It was made for an adult.

If someone's child sees that movie, or another like it, it is the parent's fault, not one else's.

Those pushing LB546 and LB272 try to make it seem that those in opposition to the bills are pro-porn and want to destroy this nation's youth.

If you think this bill doesn't affect you because you don't read Playboy, think again. Because the next time you go to buy a tape that is currently being labeled "Explicit Lyrics," it might not be there at all. It would have become just another victim in the war of morality.
