VOICE hopes bad luck ends

By Chuck Green
 Senior Reporter

Executive candidates from the VOICE party are hoping the string of bad luck that has plagued them in the last couple of weeks won't carry into Wednesday night's ASUN elections.

ASUN

"With the exception of the last few weeks, our campaigning has gone really well," said Trent Steele, VOICE's first vice-presidential candidate. "Then, things started happening."

Steele was referring to the misfortunes of Keith Benes, the party's presidential candidate.

Last week, Benes was injured when he lost control of his car and slammed into a tree. Two weeks earlier, he missed the first Association of the Students of the University of Nebraska debate with representatives from PARTY, VOICE's opponent, because of illness.

"Before that, Keith has been out

- Working for investment of outside donations to the university in academic programs rather than artwork.

- Trying to gain support for stronger English standards for graduate assistants.

- Increasing the number of bicycle racks in high-traffic areas.

- Paving existing gravel parking lots.

- Installing a student parking czar to oversee all student parking concerns.

- Improved snow-removal priorities for students with disabilities.

Jill Anderson, VOICE's second vice-presidential candidate, said she hoped there would be a large voting turnout for Wednesday's election.

"I think that's very important to the credibility of ASUN," Anderson said. "I'd like to see students get involved in their government, and it's important that they do so they can choose the government that most fairly represents them."

there working very, very hard, and we think we have a good chance Wednesday night," Steele said.

VOICE's platform objectives include:

- Improvement and repair of University of Nebraska-Lincoln buildings.

- Opposition to the inclusion of minuses in the grading system.

- An attempt to hold student fees to a zero-percent increase for 1994.

Dietz says PARTY not a joke

By Chuck Green
 Senior Reporter

What began as a joke to some has turned into a serious contender to lead ASUN into the next year.

PARTY — whose ticket includes Steve Dietz, presidential candidate; Leslie Strong, first vice-presidential candidate; and Matt Maser, second vice-presidential candidate — announced its platform in January with such objectives as bringing rock concerts to Memorial Stadium and solving the country's unemployment problem.

"Actually, it wasn't really meant as a joke," Dietz said. "But thought of making the whole thing a farce did cross our minds."

Strong agreed that PARTY candidates had planned a "light-hearted approach" to the election.

But Dietz said that idea soon evaporated.

"The more we got into it, the more we found that there really were people who thought the way we did, and we decided that we needed to do something," he said.

Besides the light-hearted objectives, PARTY's platform includes:

- A more effective evaluation process for the university's budget.

- A "wet campus," which allows for the consumption of alcohol on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus.

RHA bill would keep members off ASUN

George K. Stephan
 Staff Reporter

Two bills that would prevent any elected member of the Residence Hall Association from serving in an elected position in ASUN created some arguments when submitted at an RHA meeting Sunday.

The bills, which will be voted on March 14, state that being a member of both organizations created a conflict of interest and "could result in serious time constraints on the student."

Sandoz Sen. Cara Catlett, who said she was one of only a few students involved in both organizations, opposed the legislation and urged other members to seriously study the bill and be aware of its consequences.

Catlett said having RHA members involved in both organizations helped smooth out operations between the two student organizations.

Andrew Loudon, speaker of the ASUN senate, appeared briefly during the meeting to urge representatives to vote against the measures.

If approved, Loudon said, the measure could stop many ideally qualified students with proven representative leadership qualities from participating in ASUN.

In other business, it was announced that the RHA amendment passed two weeks ago banning smoking in food service was approved by the UNL Division of Housing and would probably become effective next August.

Also, a letter from Doug Zatechka, director of housing, was distributed to representatives concerning last year's paper towel controversy.

The letter said that housing would continue the policy reinstated last fall of keeping paper towels in residence hall restrooms, despite RHA disapproval.

RHA gained approval to have the paper towels removed last summer because of ecological problems caused by disposable paper products. The housing department reinstalled the paper towels last fall after an outbreak of shigella in Lincoln.
