

Husker tennis team faces Cowgirls first

Individual effort key, coach says second behind Kansas. En route to that finish, Oklahoma State shut out Nebraska 9-0 in a match April 17.

Nebraska isn't gunning for one team, Jacobson said. The Huskers' main goal is to finish higher than their seed in the tournament, he said.

To accomplish that, Jacobson said, the entire team is going to have to turn it up a notch.

Team members "can't be looking for someone else to win it for our team. Each individual has to take care of her own court," Jacobson said.

Nebraska's best chance for a win may come against either Iowa State or Kansas State, Jacobson said. In the regular season, the Cornhuskers lost to both teams by a score of 5-4. The Big Eight Tournament is the place to put it all together, Jacobson said.

"Basically, (the season) is all preparation for one big tournament, and this is it," he said.

The Nebraska women's tennis team is looking to rebound from last weekend's loss to Oklahoma and prove itself at the Big Eight Tournament, coach Scott Jacobson said.

The Cornhuskers will occupy the No. 7 seed in the tournament, which begins Friday in Prairie Village, Kan.

Nebraska's first round opponent will be Oklahoma State, the No. 2 seed. And from previous meetings between the two teams, it appears the Huskers have their work cut out for them.

The Cowgirls completed the Big Eight conference season with a 6-1 dual record, good enough to finish

Riding the White Horse Home: A Western Family Album

by Teresa Jordan

(author of Cowgirls: Women of the American West)

Riding the White Horse Home traces the history of four generations of Teresa Jordan's family to mirror the demise of a quintessential American way of life. This is not only their story, it is every Western family's story: it is the story of the American West.

Join the author for a reading and autographing on Friday, April 23 from 4:30 to 5:30.
