However, he said, public sales will be up, and season ticket sales in general will rise.

"We plan and hope to maintain the sellout string," he said.

Osborne said there was one way to ensure that Nebraska's sellout string continues.

"Our objective is to get the stadium sold out in advance," he said.

Osborne said that since the athletic department was self-supporting, selling out the stadium each home football Saturday is important for more than just the NCAA record.

"It's very important to the athletic department, because if we weren't selling out the stadium, it would be a massive problem, since we don't receive any student fees," Osborne said.

Byrne said he hoped to see an upward swing of student season ticket sales in the near future, therefore ensuring a full Memorial Stadium for several years.

"We're going to work hard to try and regenerate student interest," Byrne said. "My goal is to make Nebraska football a hard ticket to get again."

Frazier comes to aid of Benes home

Nebraska quarterback Tommie Frazier had a new hobby thrust upon him last month: firefighting.

And the thankful recipient of Frazier's newfound talents was Keith Benes, president of the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska.

The fiberglass roof of the patio at Benes' home at 2800 N. 40th St. caught on fire after an electrical short from a refrigerator ignited it.

Frazier was among a threesome who spotted the flames, including fellow Cornhusker football player Barron Miles, who jumped a security fence to save the main portion of the house from catching fire.

The threesome reportedly grabbed a couple of garden hoses to help contain the flames until the fire department arrived on the scene.

Benes said the trio saved the Benes home from catastrophe.

"I love telling the story that Tommie Frazier saved my house,"

Benes said. "It destroyed the roof above the patio and there was smoke damage in the garage, but our neighbors said they prevented thousands of dollars worth of damage."

Benes said the estimated repair costs of the fire are between $3,000-$4,000.

Frazier, the sophomore football standout who won Big Eight Offensive Freshman-of-the-Year honors last season in helping Nebraska win the Big Eight title, said coming to the aid of Benes' home was natural for him.

"It was just something that was instinct," Frazier said. "If it wasn't for us, the whole house probably would have caught on fire."

Frazier said he likes to help people whenever possible.

"If something needs to be done and somebody needs help, you should try your best to help them," he said.

Benes said every community needs individuals like the firefighting threesome.

"It showed a lot of character on their part," he said. "I think we're well represented by individuals like that."

"I knew I'd be making a lot of trips to the kitchen the minute I laid eyes on table #7. The woman ordered steak tartare and then sent it back five times for being under-cooked.

I was bringing her a blackened hockey puck when I realized my Birkenstocks were beautiful.

It must be the way they support my feet because I didn't feel the least bit worn-out. In fact, I found myself suggesting steak tartare to my next table."
