Colorado coach develops policy for game brawling

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) - Colorado coach Bill McCartney on Tuesday outlined a new team policy on fighting but will not make it retroactive to those players involved in last Saturday's bench-clearing brawl against Miami.

Colorado was trailing badly just before half time when the brawl erupt-ed. Seven Hurricanes and five Buffaloes were ejected. The Buffs rallied but fell short 35-29 in the final half.

Miami coach Dennis Erickson unveiled a similar new fighting policy earlier Tuesday but none of the measures will be imposed against those involved in Saturday's melee.

The new fighting guidelines for both teams include a one-game suspension for any player leaving the bench area to participate in a fight.

McCartney said he would also impose "severe consequences for anyone who leaves the bench area if a (fight) should occur on the field.

McCartney did not suspend any players for CU's next game which is against Missouri on Oct. 9.

"I looked extensively at the film and I looked to see if we had anyone flagrantly out of control where he was jeopardizing the health of others," McCartney said in a news release. "I just didn't see it. I just in good conscience couldn't 'suspend anybody unless I suspended everybody. Miami coach Dennis Erickson said virtually the same thing of his players' involvement in the melee.

Colorado president Judith Albino said she had met with both McCartney and Athletic Director Bill Marolt.

"I am deeply disappointed by what happened...I have approved the coach's swift, strong and appropriate actions to ensure that no such incidents occur in the future,' Albino said.

Colorado senior captain Ron Woolfork said of the incident, "With the magnitude of the game, tempers flared up and it just got out of hand. We've learned our lesson, we've just got to move on.'

use the emotion.

If a fight breaks out, then the coaches immediately take the field and proceed to the home team's end zone.

But they won't fight. Instead, they'll play a board game. That way, the coaches can get involved in the action, and players are protected from injury. Then, if they get all fired up, it will be over a game of Candyland and not over a sock in the jaw.

Picture this: Tom Osborne and Bill McCartney approach the end zone after Kevin Ramaekers accidentally late-hits Stewart for the 11th time. Both coaches, naturally, are seething with the accumulated anger of their players.

The two sit down and begin play. As the game is about to be won, Osborne exclaims: "All right McCartney, you cheap-shot teachin' dog-licker, I'll give you what's coming to you — YAHTZEE."

The crowd roars, and Osborne returns to his sideline, dice in hand and arms raised in victory. Now the fighting is out of everyone's system, and Nebraska has the momentum to go on and win.

This rule would make coaches become more well-rounded. Not only will they need to be great gridiron tactitioners, but they will need to be able to play a mean game of Parchesi.

In the least, it'll give new meaning to the phrase "Roll Tide."
