Dining with regents encouraged

By Andrea Kaser
 Senior Editor

Students opposing a proposed green space at UNL or an engineering college at UNO should come to Friday's Regents on Campus Luncheon, ASUN's Government Liaison Committee chairman said.

The free luncheon at the Wick Alumni Center is open to all students. Beginning at 11:30 a.m., it will precede the 1 p.m. meeting of the University of Nebraska Board of Regents. The regents will vote at that meeting on UNL Chancellor Graham Spanier's proposal to replace the parking lot north of the Nebraska Union with a grassy area.

"We're going to have the last say to these regents before they go into that meeting," GLC chairman Andrew Loudon said at a Wednesday press conference.

"If students are serious about blocking the construction of the green space, they should show up Friday ... and let the regents know how they feel."

Because regents also will discuss preliminary plans for considering a separate engineering college at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, Loudon said UNL engineering students should make a special effort to attend the luncheon.

"We need to let the regents know that we're very serious about keeping the quality of our engineering college high here in Lincoln," he said.

Because four of the regents are up for re-election in the coming year, Loudon said they should be more willing than usual to listen to students.

At the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska meeting, president Keith Benes said he thought there should be a large turnout of students and senators.

Loudon urged all senators to attend the luncheon.

"You will be the last lobbying effort in our fight against the grassy knoll," Loudon said.

Union expansion in works, official says

By Michelle McGowan
 Staff Reporter

Within the next few years, UNL students will see an expansion of the Nebraska Union.

Frank Kuhn, assistant director of the union, said it would expand westward, toward the Administration Building.

"The idea came a long time ago when we had a recreation area downstairs," Kuhn said. "The bookstore took over that space, and it had always been planned that we would have an expansion to regain what space was lost with their addition."

Besides adding more recreational space, the addition will provide student organizations with more office space, he said.

A new main entrance and a more accessible entrance for the disabled will be added to the union. The main entrance will be in line with student traffic coming from the northwest, he said.

"We're just in the starting process now," Kuhn said.

A planning committee is being organized, he said, between the Union Board, UNL Facilities Management, the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska, and UNL students.

"The Union Board has had several meetings on who will be on the planning committee," Kuhn said.

The planning committee will determine how much the expansion will cost, where the money will come from and how to use the new space.

After clearing the planning committee, Kuhn said, the proposal would advance to a university planning committee, the chancellor and ultimately the NU Board of Regents for approval.

The expansion is expected to begin within two to four years, Kuhn said.
