Monday, November 1, 1993

Daily Nebraskan

Sleepout

Continued from Page 1

the Lincoln/Lancaster Homeless Coalition, said the cold didn't deter participants from coming.

"It's not much colder than last year," Carpenter said. About 500 people registered at the gate, he said, and 150 were still there at 2 a.m. He said the numbers dwindled during the night because of the cold.

Carpenter said although he had hoped to get 1,000 people to participate in the event, he was pleased with the turnout. Last year 600 area residents participated and 200 slept out.

Carpenter said $27,000 was raised during the event. Late donations will increase that number during the next few weeks, he said.

"Twenty-seven thousand dollars will go a long ways to help homeless people," Carpenter said. "I really think the event is a wonderful example of a cross-cultural event to address the problem of homelessness.'

Carpenter said a nearby protest of the event also did not affect it. While all people are free to express their views, he said, he thinks the protest was misdirected.

"I think everyone should be free on how they give, and others should not judge on how they give," Carpenter said.

Mike Lyman, a volunteer at the Peoples City Mission, said he was pleased with the money raised and the community support for Michelle Millikin, 24, receives a sandwich from the Salvation Army during the Great Plains Winter SleepOut Friday night.

SleepOut. But he said the community still had more to do. Lyman said some sleepers came to the event for the wrong reasons, to make themselves look good or but more came for the right ones. "I'm sure there are people here care," Lyman said.

have fun, but there are a lot that do

Former UNL professor publishes researching aid

such as those at the Nebraska State

"help unlock the raw materials of history for researchers who are not also was used Oct. 12, when 21 .38-caliber and .380-caliber rounds were trained as professional historians."

Hill said he hoped his book would

Hill's book was based on observa-listorical Society.

discovered.

lif

From Staff Reports

Former UNL professor Michael R. Hill's book helping students research papers in historical archives has been published.

Hill's book, "Archival Strategies and Techniques," is part of the SAGE Qualitative Methods Series. SAGE is an international publishing company, with major offices in London, New caliber rounds. The metal detector partment, said one .357 round and two search of Bjorklund's house.

Trial

Continued from Page 1

Delhi, India, and Newbury Park, Cation of archives in the United States, Canada and England.

Hill's book is a guide for first-time researchers of archival manuscripts, from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1982 and 1989. He has taught at UNL, Iowa State University, Albion College and the University of Minnesota-Duluth.

Hill currently is writing a biography of Nebraska-born jurist Roscoe Pound.

rifle rounds also were found on Oct. 12 but were not seized by authorities. Pekarek said he was unaware at the David Pekarek, an investigator with time that police had found .357 rounds one .380-caliber round and two .38- the Lancaster County Sheriff's De- and rifle ammunition during a Dec. 2

WET T-SHIRT CONTEST Every Monday 10:30 p.m. 1823 "O" Street NO COVER

Continued from Page 1

ed homeless people, and that made him angry. Hird said his group appreciated SleepOut's intentions, but criticized its method. The money and awareness SleepOut raised would help the homeless, he said, but the method made fun of them.

In addition, the fund-raiser did not provide participants with an accurate experience of homelessness, he said.

But Hird said more than the fundraising method needed to change.

Hird said he also wanted to see changes in the way the money raised by the event was handled.

The money should be put in a bank account where transactions could be documented, he said. A board, consisting of Hird, homeless activists and homeless people, should be created to oversee the transactions.

That way, Hird said, the Lincoln residents would know their money was well spent.

Hird said he had proposed his idea to SleepOut organizers but they had not responded.

Hird said his group was protesting these problems.

When you live on the street, you don't get catered food and a Port-a-Potty," Hird said.

