tude, and to be honest, this whole process seemed like a daunting task at first," she said. "But we're very pleased with these (finalists') names and with the process in general. These four were universally the best candidates that the committee had to agree on."

Carris, 52, has served as Northern Iowa's president since 1983.

In a prepared statement released Monday, Carris said he was pleased to be in the final pool.

"I am honored to have been nominated for the presidency of the University of Nebraska and pleased to have been selected as a finalist," Carris said. "I look forward to meeting the regents and participating in the formal interview process."

Baker, 55, has held Cal-Polytechnic's top position since 1979.

Baker said he was honored to be a finalist.

"The University of Nebraska is an excellent institution," he said in an interview. "I look forward to talking to the people on campus and in Lincoln."

Smith, 55, has been Cal-Irvine's executive vice chancellor since 1990 and was acting chancellor of the school until July.

"I see it as an enormous opportunity and a challenge," Smith said in an interview.

Gregory O'Brien, 49, has been the chancellor at the University of New Orleans since 1987.

Gregory O'Brien could not be reached for comment.

Committee members have kept close contact with the finalists throughout the search, Milliken said.

"We've been talking to (all candidates) all along," he said. "There's a great deal of hand-holding that goes on with this process."

Judge postpones student's hearing

From Staff Reports

A judge postponed UNL student Richard Barrett's Monday court appearance for sexual assault until Nov. 22.

Barrett, 21, a sophomore engineering major, allegedly assaulted a 20-year-old University of Nebraska-Lincoln student after a study session at her apartment on Oct. 21.

Lincoln Police Sgt. Ann Heermann said the woman had several other students at the apartment to study for a test.

Apparently she, Barrett, and another woman fell asleep, Heermann said. The woman woke at 6 a.m. when Barrett allegedly had forced sexual intercourse with her.

Cited with first-degree sexual assault, Barrett was released from the Lancaster County jail on Oct. 27 after paying 10 percent of a $10,000 bond.

ing did not concern him unduly, the wounds did.

He said he still experienced pain and had to limit his physical activity.

But there is more than physical healing ahead, he said.

"I still have to go through some psychological realignment," he said.

Ong returned to classes after missing one week. Adding to the stress of catching up, Ong said his concentration lasts for only the first 15 minutes of classes.

"After that, my head starts wandering," Ong said.

His thoughts wander back to the assault and ahead to the possible punishment of his attackers.

Three suspects have been cited in the case, including one UNL student. The suspects' names will not be released until the Lancaster County Attorney's office files charges against them.

The suspects could face misdemeanor charges that carry a maximum sentence of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Whatever the result, Ong said he wanted to get on with his life. He said he wouldn't hesitate to wait alone at night at Broyhill Fountain again.

"I'm not letting myself be intimidated by this incident," he said.

"I still have to go on."

Trial

a .223 rifle were stolen from his house, 1944 Lake St., on Sept. 17, 1992.

Two guns of the same type were entered into evidence by the prosecution. Lyons said the guns stolen from his house were similar to those prosecutors say were involved in the murder.

Lyons said he knew Scott Barney, but had never invited Barney into his house. Lyons said Barney saw the guns while he was cleaning them at a mutual friend's house.

The stolen .223 rifle was recovered by Lincoln police at Barney's father's house.

In other testimony, the manager of Maurices, a women's clothing store, testified that Harms bought a green B.U.M. Equipment jacket at the store in July.

Harms wore a similar jacket Sept. 22, 1992, the night she disappeared.

Two of Harms' friends testified about the type of clothing she liked to wear. Both witnesses cried when looking at Harms' photo in court.

Bjorklund's trial will resume Tuesday at 8:30 a.m.

nine of the 10 candidates this week at FSU, she said.

Heyward said the screening committee consisted of FSU professors, students, alumni groups, staff members and community members.

The committee will trim the 10-candidate list to a small number of candidates who will return for longer, in-depth interviews by the end of the week, Heyward said.

The first round of interviews will be short, Heyward said.

"The meetings are just to meet the committee," she said. "It's a fast way to get this huge committee together. They're from all over the state."

The second round of interviews will be a two-day process, she said.

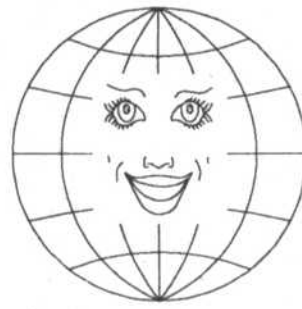

An FSU Board of Regents subcommittee will make a final recommendation for the full board to vote on.

Heyward said she hoped to have the final selection made by Thanksgiving.

Heyward said Massengale's responsibilities as FSU president would be to serve as the school's chief academic officer, similar to Nebraska's chancellor position.

"He'll be responsible for a major fund-raising campaign," Heyward said. He also would be responsible for alumni group cultivation and for public outreach, she said.

Massengale could not be reached for comment.
