Clinton says Serbians safe from airstrikes, for now

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Clinton said Sunday that Serb military leaders either moved or surrendered enough of their artillery surrounding Sarajevo to make NATO air strikes unnecessary "at this time."

But the president warned that could change if the progress of the Serbians was reversed.

"Despite the significant events of the day, we must remain vigilant," Clinton said in a statement read by Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers. "All parties should be aware that the ultimatum stands. The deadline has not been extended. Any heavy weapons in the exclusion zone not under U.N. control are, and will remain, subject to air strikes."

Myers acknowledged that "a handful" of weapons probably were not yet under U.N. control, but would be soon.

The White House said the silencing of Serbian guns was a victory for the Clinton administration, NATO, the United Nations and Russia, which urged compliance of its allied Serbs and sent troops to the area. Clinton said he hoped the action would spur peace negotiations.

"This week's events clearly have given the residents of Sarajevo a respite from the shelling and a measure of hope," the president said.

There were an unusual number of staffers at the White House for a Sunday evening, but the atmosphere was calm with no outward sign of any activity as the deadline approached—and then passed. The president had dinner in the family quarters.

The Clinton administration insisted all day that NATO would hold to the open-ended ultimatum, leaving Serbs open to air strikes after 7 p.m. EST if they did not withdraw their heavy weapons from around Sarajevo or put them under control of the United Nations.

But later Sunday, administration officials signaled that strikes were not likely, saying poor weather over Sarajevo made it difficult to determine Serbian compliance.

Administration officials said it would be at least Monday before an assessment could be made and any bombing orders could be given.

Clinton and Defense Secretary William Perry were quoted by Russian officials well before the deadline as saying no immediate air strikes were necessary. The White House denied that a decision had been made that soon—or that Clinton had given any such explicit assurances to Russian President Boris Yeltsin during a telephone call placed by Yeltsin.

A senior administration official, speaking to reporters at the White House, said the Serbs produced "a dramatic increase" Sunday in the number of weapons complying with the ultimatum. But the official said some sites—"less than 10"—remained unsecured by the United Nations for several reasons, including poor weather.

D'Augelli

Violence against homosexuals on the UNL campus is not often documented, she said. But a heterosexist attitude, or the assumption that everyone is heterosexual, she said, is something encountered every day.

D'Augelli said increasing awareness both in the community and on campus was the first step toward changing the stereotypes and alarming statistics. But so far, he said, that hasn't happened.

"I would like to say that everything is so much better," he said. "But they (today's gay students) are pretty much told that they have no history, and anything they want to think about is going to be problematic."

Barbara DiBernard, chairwoman of the committee for lesbian and gay concerns, said in most psychology, history and social science classes, there had been no attempt to include homosexual material.
