consider reducing a sentence in a murder case until the person has served 30 years.

Until the pardons board commutes a lifetime sentence to a certain number of years, good time for a reduced sentence does not apply, Brown said.

Brownsaid legal proceedings would be far from over if Bjorklund's sentence was death. The Nebraska Supreme Court automatically reviews each case where the death penalty is given, he said.

"After that, there is a series of up to nine other levels of review that (a person) can go through," Brown said.

The final step, he said, would be moving out of the judicial branch to the executive branch by asking the state's pardon's board to commute the sentence from death to life in prison.

"It usually takes from six to 10 years to complete these steps," Brown said.

Lancaster County District Judge Donald Endacott will determine Bjorklund's sentence alone instead of conferring with a three-judge panel.

After the last piece of evidence is entered at the sentencing hearing, Endacott said he would have 90 days to decide Bjorklund's sentence.
