

'Experts' get set to debate

By Malcom Miles
Staff Reporter

Women's Week will be celebrated tonight when the University Program Council stages one of its major events of the semester: a debate between Phyllis Schlafly and Sarah Weddington.

The two women are on opposite sides of practically every issue imaginable, from the Equal Rights Amendment to education.

Schlafly and Weddington have both been honored by numerous magazines and organizations for their work. Both also have been called on as experts by talk shows, newspapers and presidents.

Weddington is a motivational speaker, concerned with women's roles in our constantly changing world. She was one of the first women to graduate from the University of Texas Law School.

Weddington served three terms as a member of the Texas House of Representatives. She also served as President Carter's Assistant for Women's Affairs.

Weddington defended Jane Roe in the Supreme Court's Roe v. Wade case.

Schlafly, on the other hand, has been called a "pioneer of American Conservatism." She is a graduate of Harvard and Washington Universities.

Schlafly played an important role in the defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment. She also served as a member of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution under President Reagan.

"Schlafly v. Weddington: The Role of Women in the 90s" will take place at 8 p.m. in the Nebraska Union's Centennial Room. Admission for the public is $3. The event is free for UNL students.

are treated like second-class citizens.

"They are asked intelligent questions," she said.

Nebraska steaks, The Lied Jungle, the Old Market and "the beauty of Saunder's county and how friendly everyone in Yutan was" created a marvelous experience for the artists, Lamphere said.

She said it made her proud of her state.

"I thought, yeah, aren't we nice? Yeah, we're nice.

"They like the thrift stores and the dollar movie place. They can't believe you can walk into 'Schindler's List' and not stand in line," Lamphere said.

"They think this is like the cultural capital of the world."

Often thought of as a "boring cultural wasteland," Lamphere said people didn't give Nebraska enough credit for its intrigue.

The Wagon Train Project receives much of its support from the National Performance Council. The project is also funded by the Nebraska Arts Council, America Arts Alliance and other regional supporters, Lamphere said.

The project's next event is "Feather at the Flames" by the Movin' Spirits Dance Theater.
