about 75 or 80 percent. I am still not close to where I can run full speed.

"But I wanted to play, and John (Sanders) said it was my call when I wanted to come back."

The Huskers won four of their first five games with Brohawn in the lineup to reach the .500 mark.

But Brohawn said he might have provided little more than inspiration. In his first five games, he hit just .167.

"The hard part was seeing live pitching for the first time," Brohawn said. "I guess everybody is a little bit ahead of me, but I think I should be able to come in and hit right away."

Although he struggled at the plate, Brohawn said he played himself back into shape.

And it didn't take Brohawn long to get into a groove on the hill, throwing a perfect game through his first six innings Friday.

Despite striking out 12 batters, Brohawn said, he still wasn't quite at midseason form.

He gave up two hits, three walks and three runs in the seventh and eighth innings before giving way to reliever Mike Bellows.

"I got a little tired, but it felt real good to get back on the mound," Brohawn said. "I was even kind of nervous before the game, but I settled down right away."

He also settled in at the plate, helping his own cause by collecting four hits and driving in his first RBI of the season.

Brohawn, who went 6-for-12 over the weekend to raise his batting average to .278, said his foot was still not fully healed.

"I am still not 100 percent, but it's coming along," Brohawn said. "It still catches a little when I turn wrong or something, but I am running a little better."

With Brohawn in the lineup, Nebraska has won seven of nine games. But Brohawn was hesitant to say he caused the Huskers' turnaround.

"I hope I have lifted them up a little," Brohawn said, "but I think we were just ready to turn things around. And it just happened with me in the lineup."

Yarmus

But through treatments and a strong desire to live, she won a temporary victory over the cancer. She had been in remission until August.

"My mom's a fighter," April Yarmus said. "She has a strong, positive attitude so she just won't give up. "She will never walk again, but she is still fighting."

And, Yarmus said, her mom is still fighting for her while she fights her cancer.

"She tries to keep me positive because I have always been a negative person," Yarmus said. "But I am getting better."

After watching her mom's courage, Yarmus said, she has no choice but to try to remain optimistic.

"My mom's illness has made me look at things differently," Yarmus said. "I realize how fortunate I am to be able to play sports or even just to walk. It gives you a new perspective and shows you what is really important. It makes me really thankful to be healthy."
