Band relates stories of rural life

Violinist Leanne Dynneson plays the lead instrumental role with soothing melody lines that maximize the well-written transitions within Clarke County's songs.

Obviously talented, Dynneson also plays with the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra. However, when asked about her symphony participation, Dynneson sums up the unpretentious character of Clarke County with a half-chuckled answer.

"Yeah."
Nancy Cosgrove's fitting accompaniment gives Clarke County not only a folksy feel but also a rare bond for two bandmates to share. Nancy and Greg, the band's Cosgroves, are also married.

"Being in a band together was part of our marriage contract," Nancy joked.

Now for Clarke County's latest chapter-worthy developments, the Zimmerman twins.

Clarke County's low-end section doubles your visual and musical refreshment with the practically identical duo of Barry and Ben Zimmerman. Barry plays drums while Ben adds bass guitar.

Since their infusion last winter, the Zimmermans' contributions have broadened Clarke County's horizon, and they deserve credit for their "for-the-song" attitude that illuminates the spirit of Clarke County.

Plus, two red-haired look-alikes always make things interesting.

A suitable introduction to Clarke County must include mention of the unmistakable vocals of Greg Cosgrove.

The soul-churning effects of his I'm-reaching-for-your-gut-now voice have earned Cosgrove acclaim in the past. His meaty vocal chords blaze within Clarke County's acoustic atmosphere like fire through a pasture.

Overall, Clarke County's throat-clearing passion provides its listeners with a sense of rural and spiritual realism. Imagine a folk ensemble wearing steel-toed boots and throwing down six-packs of Old Style.

There isn't a drunk priest out there who wouldn't appreciate this band.

Clarke County's storybook will be performed in Omaha on Friday night at Kilgore's and in Lincoln at Duffy's Tavern on Sunday night.

'Lady' is pick of the litter trainer of the first Jamaican bobsled team.

The movie is one hilarious hoot after another and is a sure-fire hit for the kids. This one is worth hunting down.

Malice (R) — A supposedly Hitchcockian-type thriller, "Malice" falls flat on its face.

Andy Safian (Bill Pullman) is the dean of a college where women are being terrorized by a serial rapist. If that wasn't enough on his mind, his wife Tracy (Nicole Kidman) is suffering from mysterious abdominal pains, and Andy's old buddy Jed Hill (Alec Baldwin) has just come to town as the egotistical new surgeon at the town hospital. Bad acting, bad direction, bad writing. Go trim your nose hairs instead of renting this one.

PICK OF THE WEEK — It's snuggle-up time, everybody! Grab a blanket or comforter, a cup of hot chocolate and maybe some munchies to watch "Lady and the Tramp," a Walt Disney film that made spaghetti the "pasta of love."

The love story of how a sheltered house dog and a spirited street pooch meet, it's "Romeo and Juliet" on four legs. Watch it with friends, family or a loved one; it will be enjoyed by all.

It's a slow week for new releases: one terrific comedy, a pathetic drama and another blast-from-the-past pick of the week. As usual, all new releases are available today.

Cool Runnings (PG) — One of the late, great John Candy's last films, "Cool Runnings" is loosely based on the real-life story. Candy played the
