

Spring cleaning

Damon Lee/DN

Kevin Hervert, a senior advertising major, rakes leaves at Centennial Mall with members of Delta Upsilon Fraternity Sunday afternoon. The cleanup project was one of several volunteer activities members of the fraternity were doing as part of their "DU in the Streets" philanthropy project.

Endacott

At one point, Helvie argued that when hearing the new trial motion, Endacott had submitted as evidence his account of events with jury members and was therefore already a witness in the case.

Endacott said the document was not submitted with that intention and demanded that it be stricken from the record.

If Judge Merritt finds jurors were not prejudiced in any way, I will resume a duty and a responsibility which I cannot shirk.

—Endacott,
Lancaster County district judge

Endacott said he felt he had a duty to complete the case and that appointing another judge or panel of judges to sentence Bjorklund would be “very wasteful and an enormous delay.”

“This is a duty and a high responsibility that this court accepts,” Endacott said. “... If Judge Merritt finds jurors were not prejudiced in any way, I will resume a duty and a responsibility which I cannot shirk.”

Endacott said he would take over Merritt’s cases May 5 and 6 in Lincoln in exchange for Merritt’s agreement to hear the new trial motion in Sidney.

Endacott also said his prayer practices would remain private in the future.

“When I pray, it won’t be around court, and it won’t be around attorneys,” he said.

Helvie said the hearing for a new trial would not be limited to the improper contact issue, but he would not comment on other issues the defense would argue.

Helvie declined comment Friday on Endacott’s decision.

Child expert to give speech

From Staff Reports

An international advocate for the rights of children will give the opening speech in the University Lecture Series on the International Year of the Family today.

Malfrid Grude Flekkoy of Oslo, Norway will speak on “Today’s Children, Tomorrow’s Families” from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Culture Center, 333 N. 14th St.

Flekkoy is currently the child psychologist of the Nic Waals Institute, a mental health program in Oslo. She also is the director of Europe’s Defense for Children International and is the editor of the International Journal of Children’s Rights.

Flekkoy worked for UNICEF at the International Child Development Center in Florence, Italy, for two years in study and dissemination of ideas about mechanisms for monitoring the fulfillment of children’s rights under the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.

She has also written a book, “A Voice for Children,” which focuses on her experiences as the ombudsman for children in Norway.
