

SIGNS OF CAMPUS LIFE

Jeffrey Robb/DN

Jay Noble, a Lincoln resident and 1987 University of Nebraska-Lincoln graduate, nibbles on a cookie Wednesday at Broyhill Fountain. More and more people are returning to campus, and Noble said that was why he was there. "It's the beginning of the school year," he said. "You can come by and see all the freshman."

System answers financial aid questions

By Charles Isom
Staff Reporter

University students now can have their financial aid questions answered by a machine.

The Office of Scholarships and Financial Aid installed a new phone system July 21, said Geri L. Larsen, financial aid specialist.

The new system can assist 40 callers at once. The office could only help three people at the same time before.

The phone system works similarly to NRoll, UNL's automated enrollment system, Larsen said. Students dial the financial aid number where they are given a menu to select desired information. As with NRoll, they can call 24 hours a day.

Unlike NRoll, if students call between 8:00 a.m. and 5 p.m., they can ask a staff member questions. That allows special problems to receive special attention, Larsen said.

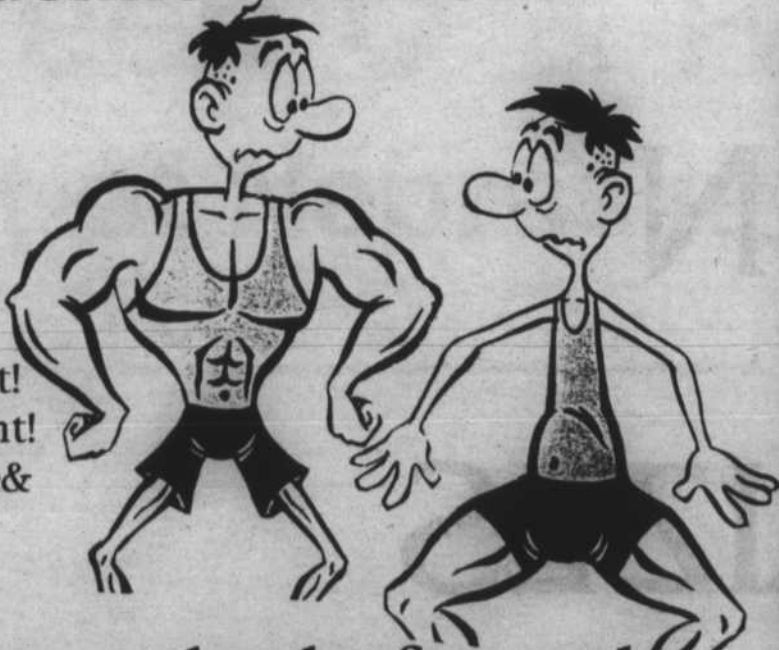

The new system is open to the public. No personal identification number is needed to access the system.

Students have to dial 472-2030 to access the main menu.
